GREAT WARSAW BATTLE

AUSTRIANS SAY RUSSIANS ARE NOW STOPPED

VIENNA, via Berlin and Wireless to London, Feb. 6.—An official statement issued here today says:

"In Poland and Western Galicia the situation is unchanged.

"Russian attacks have been renewed at certain places in the Carpathians, but have broken down with heavy loss to the enemy. Our attacks continue in the forest region. The number of prisoners taken by us in the Carpathians has been increased by about 4,850."

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY.
Staff Correspondent of the American.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 6.—More than a quarter of a million picked troops and more than one thousand heavy guns are engaged in a terrific battle in the region of the Bzura and Rawka rivers in Poland, and upon the outcome of this conflict hangs the fate of the present campaign for the mastery of western Poland.

For a week the heavy artillery has been shaking the blood-soaked earth with its thunder and the attacks of the Germans and the counter attacks of the Russians have left the battlefield carpeted with corpses.

General von Mackenzen, one of the most brilliant commanders in the German army, was selected by Field Marshal von Hindenburg to smash the Russian centre and open up the way for the drive the Germans are trying to make against Warsaw. With 100,000 picked infantrymen and 600 big guns under his immediate command General von Mackenzen has locked with the Russians in a death grip the ferocity of which has not previously been known in the present war.

PLANNED TO EASE PRESSURE.

Field Marshal von Hindenburg planned to cause a withdrawal of the new Russian forces from their advanced positions in East Prussia, and also to lessen the Russian pressure against the Austro-German force in western Galicia by striking a decisive blow at the Russian centre, west of Warsaw. If the Germans fail in their present assault against the Russians the battle line will undoubtedly be pushed westward to the border of East Prussia. The Russian General Staff hopes that within the next fortnight German soil will be bearing the brunt of the heavy fighting.

But in the present conflict, which is raging over a front not more than ten miles long, the Russians have to reckon with the reckless valor of the Germans. The first line German troops have been dubbed the "death brigade," and each man has been warned that death must be expected. In spite of the blasts from Russian rifles, machine guns and heavy artillery, the Germans have attacked time and again with bravery which compels the admiration of their foes.

TRENCHES FULL OF DEAD.

Trenches have literally been filled with corpses until they offer no further protection, and the Germans and

John D. Picks Young Men to Handle His Millions

Remarkable Snapshots of Andrew Carnegie and John D. Rockefeller as They Appeared on the Witness Stand

"I have always tried to select clean young men with ambition to make their way in the world. From these young men I shall select the future heads of the business."—From John D. Rockefeller's testimony before the Federal Industrial Relations Commission.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—John D. Rockefeller, Sr., the richest man in the world, today collected $5 in fees for testifying before the federal Commission on Industrial Relations yesterday, although he had not been subpoenaed. Mr. Rockefeller appeared voluntarily and unexpectedly. He received $2 for testifying and $3 for mileage between this city and Tarrytown. The money is paid by the United States government.

The views of the two richest men in the world—told on the witness stand—as to "causes for industrial unrest" are now in the possession of the commission.

The first of these, Andrew Carnegie, nimbly mounted to the witness chair when called. He wore a neat fitting, carefully pressed cutaway suit of black, with a high Piccadilly collar and black bow tie. His only jewel was a diamond stud in his shirt front. His

COLLISION ON N. Y. ELEVATED

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—More than a score of persons were injured today when a local south-bound Ninth avenue elevated train crashed into the rear of a stationary train at Fiftieth street station.

The rear end of the first train and the front end of the second train crumpled up, the passengers being cut and bruised by flying glass and debris.

Fire followed the collision. The fire started when some of the wood from the cars fell to the third rail and spread to the bodies of the cars. It was soon extinguished. The guards hustled the passengers to the platforms and out on the elevated structure.

The motorman of the colliding train was caught in his box and badly crushed, one of his legs being broken.

Women fainted or became hysterical and had to be assisted from the cars.

MORE GOOD SLOGANS

(From the Boston Post).

The State Commission on Unemployed says "Do It Now." The BOSTON AMERICAN starts a cry of "Buy It Now." The paint trade people say "Paint Now," which has attracted so much attention.

The object of all these slogans is the same—to get things started, to help the unemployed, to restore confidence, to bring back prosperity for us all. There is plenty for everybody to do in this direction. The more good cries the better. Let us all cooperate to hasten the coming of the Era of Good Times.

Another British Steamship Sunk

THE LIZARD, Eng., Feb. 6.—A radiogram from the steamship Poland states that the British steamship London foundered off Penzance, Eng., last night. One member of the crew was picked up. It is believed that the vessel was either torpedoed by a German submarine or else struck a mine.

Japanese Seize Norwegian Ship

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 6.—The big Norwegian freighter Christian Born, Captain Hills, was seized today by Japanese warships, 200 miles off the Japanese coast, according to a wireless dispatch received here. The seizure was the result of alleged irregularities in the Bore papers. The Christian Borg sailed from Shanghai January 27 for San Francisco by the way of Japanese ports, with a capacity cargo of Oriental merchandise consigned to the Robert Dollar Company of this city.

Rescue Girls in New York Fire

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Fifty girls were panic stricken when fire today swept the seventh story loft building at Nos. 102-105 Avenue A, occupied by Wolf & Abramson, manufacturers of ladies' clothing, and the Delling Furniture Stores Company and spread to the seven-story building occupied by M. Tennenbaum, a furniture manufacturer, adjoining. All the girls were rescued without injury.

FATHER SAYS YOUNG COE MAY NOT BE DEAD

Dr. Henry Clark Coe, Sr., father of the young Standard Oil employe who has been missing for a week from his home at No. 1388 Commonwealth avenue, today consulted with detectives with a view to issuing circulars bearing on the young man's photograph and description, and to increasing the reward offered to $500.

Mrs. Coe, bride of less than a year, is secluded at the Commonwealth avenue home, but she confers with those active in the search for her husband and gives them every aid.

From New York comes word that college and club men there, friends of young Coe, are taking an active part in the search.

In Boston a promising clew which pointed to young Coe's having been seen at the Tremont Building last Thursday was rendered doubtful when an attorney in the building said that the man described was his client, a young man who had recently inherited considerable money, and who had been much about the building since.

FATHER MAKES STATEMENT.

Dr. Coe, the missing man's father, discussed the progress of the search for his son today. He said:

We have received a great many letters and communications about my son, but we put little hope or no weight in most of them. The report that he was seen in Lawrence has been thoroughly investigated, but thus far nothing helpful has been brought to light.

Today our energies will be centred on the Tremont Building clew, the report that he was seen there Thursday afternoon.

I expect to return to New York today. Mr. and Mrs. Ainslee, Mrs. Coe's parents, are on their way from Duluth. Mrs. Coe is bearing up splendidly under the strain, though she sees only people it is necessary for her to see. Of course she feels terribly, but she is not confined to her bed.

We think it highly possible that my son may be wandering about somewhere. His brain has been heavily taxed lately, he was so wrapped up in his business. He was overworked, and something like aphasia is possible.

The theory that he is held for ransom does not appeal to me as probable.

I have communicated with the Money-Making Agents Must Know the Art of Selling

To sell merchandise or useful novelties from house to house requires real talent. It takes men and women who understand the science of getting audiences with strangers—who are able to win confidence with a few words.

A corps of such agents is one of the most potent selling forces that modern manufacturers employ. The only problem is its organization—the finding of the right material—and here is a hint as regards that:

The Boston American reaches discriminating people who think. It is essentially a newspaper that appeals to the competent.

Its "Agents Wanted" columns are naturally productive of agents of a high order—the kind who are responsible for results that count.

If you seek those who can point to past successes and show clean records, prepare your "Agents and Canvassers" ad today and leave it with any of the American's Want Ad stations, the Branch Office at 264 Washington street or Main Office at 30 Summer street.

COE, MISSING OIL SALESMAN, SEEN IN BOSTON ON THURSDAY

Standard Oil office in New York, thinking he might have been in touch with them there, but they have heard nothing.

The report that he had told some one he was going to see friends on Zeigler street with Mrs. Coe is a puzzling circumstance, for they had no friends there or in that neighborhood.

There was absolutely no friction between the son and his bride. They were a devoted couple; he was a genial, happy fellow and there was nothing like a quarrel or an argument between them.

MAY INCREASE REWARD.

Dr. Coe added that he would today consult detectives as to the preparation of a circular bearing young Coe's photograph and description for distribution throughout New England. "We shall also," he continued, "talk over whether it would be wise to increase the reward to $500."

Dr. Coe referred to the Lawrence clew. The AMERICAN has investigated the report that Coe was seen in Lawrence. Miss Katie Hulligan, a waitress in Morgan's lunch room on Amesbury street, was shown a photograph of Coe. She said:

"A man who looks like that came in here yesterday and had a meal."

Mrs. Nellie Chandler, who waited on the man referred to, likewise thought he might have been the original of the Coe photograph.

Walter C. Cheney, an attorney in the Bay State building in Lawrence, was the man who sent the stranger to the lunchroom. He said:

"The man came in her Thursday and asked for the price of a meal. He was well dressed and well bred, and I told hi mto go over to Morgan's and I would telephone them to give him something to eat. He went over and they tell me he ordered a beef stew and then a kidney stew and just he seemed mighty nervous. He left as soon as he had eaten."

SEEMED IN SEMI-STUPOR.

Mrs. C. S. Elliott, a woman dress and corset maker in the same building, looked at a picture of Coe and said a man who looked like that came in to her office Thursday asking for something to eat, but she refused and he hurried away.

Andrew Gibbons, a car starter, said a man looking like Coe's picture dried his feet at a radiator in the waiting room on Thursday, and seemed to be in a semi-stupor.

There the trail of the Lawrence man ends.

The belief of Dr. Coe that his son may have aphasia is strengthened by a report that places Coe in Boston on the day of his disappearance. He, or someone like him, was seen here Zeigler and Warren streets, Roxbury.

He wore a fur coat with the collar thrown back. The man appeared nervous and was looking down Zeigler street, from Warren street in the direction of Harrison avenue.

The reporter's informant was a man attracted by the striking likeness of Coe in a copy of a late edition of the AMERICAN, which he held in his hand.

"I think I knew Coe," said the man, who refused to give his name. "If I'm not mistaken, I met him in a plumbing shop making a sale of handles used by plumbers. He impressed me as being of a nervous disposition and a glib talker."

LEFT SAMPLE CASE.

Coe's sample case was located by an AMERICAN reporter at the plumbing shop of Schwehr & Co., No. 139 Northampton street, South End, where Coe left it Friday, January 29, at 5:45 p. m.

A young woman bookkeeper in charge told the reporter she was talking with a young woman friend when Coe entered, apparently in a hurry.

"It was nothing unusual for Mr. Coe to come here," said the young woman bookkeeper. "He called here often to get our orders for oils and candles used in our trade.

"As I remember Mr. Coe that afternoon, he appeared to be in a great hurry to catch a car for home. He excused himself for breaking in on the conversation I was holding with a young woman acquaintance of mine.

"'Excuse me, I would like to leave my case here till I call for it,' is what I think he said.

"TO MEET HIS WIFE."

"Before leaving he explained it was his intention to get home in time to enable him to have supper, dress and go to a house on Zeigler street, Roxbury, with his wife. He positive he said Zeigler street. He made us goodbye and left. I thought he was going to get the car at Washington and Northampton streets.

"One of our men came in some time later and mentioned the fact that he saw the oil salesman on the other side of Washington street, going toward Roxbury." Zeigler street is in that direction.

Theo Schwehr, proprietor of the store, entered and volunteered the information that Coe was "one of the best salesmen he ever met." He showed the reporter Coe's case and was willing it should be photographed if it could in any way assist in finding Coe. The case was not locked. It contained small bottles of sample oils, cans of grease and colored candles.

"Several men have called here about that case this morning," said Schwehr. "Among them was a representative of the Standard Oil Company. He told me not to give up that case to anybody. He felt I ought to hold on to it and give it to Coe incase he returns. If was nothing new for him to leave the case here. I will say, though, that this is the longest time the case has been here. He left it here three days on one occasion. I cannot believe he is murdered.

"I feel he will show up all right."

PAWNSHOPS CANVASSED.

When Coe called with the case, he told my bookkeeper he was in a hurry to get home to supper and return with his wife to an entertainment on Zeigler street.

"He called here many times. He thought the world of his wife. Before his marriage he used to twit him about wedding. He told us after the wedding that he and his wife were decided to each other."

Patrolman Curcoran of the East Dedham Street Station entered the store and was shown Coe's case. Curcoran's beat takes in Northampton street, and he was anxious to find out when Coe was there last.

A canvass of pawnshops along Washington street failed to reveal any information of a man answering the description of Coe calling at any of the places to pawn a diamond ring or fur coat or any other article. The same was true of Washington street, Roxbury. It was also learned no other person called at the same places with a fur coat to sell or pledge.

Plumbing shops in the South End and Roxbury were often visited by Coe, who was known to the proprietors, all of whom spoke in the highest terms of him as a man and a salesman. In several places he mentioned "certain parties on Zeigler street.

On Tuesday evening, January 26, Coe called at a Warren street, Roxbury, store. He inquired of Mrs. Gertrude Kelly of No. 1 Glenwood Terrace, Roxbury, the whereabouts of Zeigler street, which was a few feet away. He appeared very nervous and was anxious to know the time. Mrs. Kelly is certain that she told him it was 8:15 p. m. He said at that time he was to meet his wife in a house on Zeigler street.

"APPEARED NERVOUS."

"When I read of Mr. Coe's disappearance I was shocked," said Mrs. Kelly. "I cannot help thinking of his poor wife and how she must suffer over his absence. Really, I feel badly for Mr. Coe, he was such a gentlemanly young fellow, so full of ambition to make good for his concern and so anxious to forge to the front in his chosen calling.

"Mr. Coe came into the store Tuesday evening, January 26, and appeared very nervous. He was dressed as if he was going to a party of some sort. He asked me where Zeigler street was. I thought it funny he should ask me such a question, especially when he passed that street so many times.

"I told him where it was and then asked him if he would take an order for material we wanted. He said he was never too anxious to hurry away when there was a chance to do some business for the Standard Oil Company. With that he wrote out our order. I noticed a sparkling diamond ring on his finger when he was writing the order on the desk. My, but it did sparkle! He had another sparkler in his necktie pin.

"When he finished writing, he sort of apologized to me and inquired if I had the right time. I told him it was a quarter past eight. He said he had a peculiar experience.

"'Do you know,' he said, 'I had a funny experience tonight. I went home, forgot I had a wife, and then suddenly thought of an appointment I made with her this evening. I promised to meet her in a house on Zeigler street.'

"POSSIBLY DETAINED."

"That mention of Zeigler street struck me as very odd. I was wondering—and am yet—what he wanted to bring his wife to Zeigler street for. The idea, I must say, appeared peculiar to me.

"The account of his disappearance in the papers interested me, particularly when mention was made of his wife's condition, and I began to wonder if it was possible he would bring her to an entertainment."

Another man answering Coe's description was seen going up Dudley street hill with a companion last Friday night. There are a number of apartment houses in that vicinity. It is possible he is being detained in one of them, according to the police.

Coe knew the South End pretty thoroughly, and during his travels often met men with whom he stopped and talked. On one occasion he was seen standing in front of a saloon on Washington street a little way up from Northampton street. The block surrounding the saloon, including Leno and Reed streets, is inhabited by colored people.

Coe made it a practice to mail most of his orders to the Congress street office of the Standard Oil Company. Sometimes he would leave the orders himself. He operated his business from Room No. 543. His line of work was classified as "specialties." He was rated as a salesman and received a large salary. He always carried a good-sized roll of bills with him.

A young man in Room No. 543 referred all callers in search of information about Coe to General Manager Wilkinson. A man, who said he was General Manager H. A. Wilkinson of the Standard Oil Company, granted an interview about Coe to an AMERICAN reporter.

"Mr. Coe was employed here as a salesman," said Mr. Wilkinson. "I am the manager of the New England division. Mr. Coe's disappearance is a surprise to us. It is, I might add, a great mystery to us. He's dropped out of sight. We would like to know where he is."

Asked if Coe's accounts were O. K., Mr. Wilkinson said they were

THOUSANDS FALL IN BIG BATTLE

Russians battled with bayonets in hand-to-hand fightings over the bodies of the dead. Over the frozen soil of the battlefield, now plowed with shrapnel and sprinkled with corpses, the tide of battle has swung backward and forward, but official dispatches from the front now declare that the German offensive has been checked.

Inspired by the presence of Czar Nicholas, who has gone to the Polish front, the Russians are countering all along the line.

The losses of the German legions are enormous. Within the past five days it is estimated 50,000 Germans have been killed, wounded or taken prisoners. The Russian losses were necessarily very heavy, but no figures were given out.

Again the superiority of numbers has come to the aid of the Russians. Tens of thousands of fresh Russian reserves have been hurled forward against the Germans in the past forty-eight hours to break down the resistance of the Teuton troops, whose endurance has been taxed to the utmost by the incessant fighting of the past week.

PRESSURE IS UNABATED.

In East Prussia, north of the Mazurian Lake district, the pressure of the Russians continues unabated. In Galicia artillery duels are reported and in the Carpathians the Russian and Austro-German forces are again at grips, battling for strategic ground. Near Oujok (in the northern Carpathians), the Austrian defensive broke down before the drives of the Russians, who took nearly 5,000 prisoners. The Austrians retreated after blowing up their trenches. Southeast of Oujok, the Austrian line still hold, thanks to the advance of their artillery.

The artillery duelling in the vicinity of Borjimow and Gouzine, in Poland, is spoken of as the most terrific of the war.

South of the Skierniewice-Warsaw railway another fight is developing, following a long artillery engagement.

Attempts of the Austrians to launch an offensive movement on the Nida, in order to prevent any flanking movement against the German army of the centre has failed. However, another Austrian attempt in that region is looked for immediately.

25 Flee During Fire in North End; Many Seek Roof

Great volumes of smoke drove twenty-five persons, members of the families of Carlo, Luigi and Antonio Mortali, brothers, and their lodgers on the top floor of the four-story brick building Nos. 135-141 North street, North End, to fire escapes or across the roofs early today.

The basement and first and second floors are occupied by the liquor store and cafe of A. P. Seigliano & Company, the third floor being vacant. Fire, breaking out in the basement, was discovered by Patrolman Battis and caused $1,000 loss.

U. S. AWAITS OFFICIAL TEXT ON GERMAN BLOCKADE THREAT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Administration officials today awaited the official text of Germany's blockade declaration, which has been requested of Ambassador Gerard at Berlin, before determining upon the exact nature of the representations to be made to the Kaiser's government.

That this establishment of a restricted zone, including the waters of England, Holland and France, will place American as well as other nautical ships in jeopardy is assumed in official circles.

The American government's program as tentatively outlined today is said to be to ascertain the real extent of the war zone edict and then to ask what arrangements can be made to convoy American merchant men through the closed area.

Great Britain most likely will be requested to say whether she is permitting her trading vessels to fly neutral flags as charged by Germany. If England should deny this, the State Department then may be expected to inquire of the German foreign office for proof of this accusation.

PROTEST FROM THE DUTCH.

It was officially learned here today that the Dutch government has made representations to the German government requesting an explanation of certain points in the proclamation of the German Admiralty. Dutch steamship owners have protested to their government. The Dutch cabinet held a special meeting to consider Germany's stand.

The German decree declaring a war zone around England and along the north and west French coasts has resulted in a wide variety of opinions being developed, but it is stated that no instructions have been given the State Department to make a protest.

The conservative opinion is that the United States would have no equity of action unless a wrong should be actually committed by a German submarine against a vessel bearing the American flag. It is stated that if an American ship were blown up by a German submarine, "tremendous consequences would follow." The conditions created by the decree are considered of great importance to the commerce of the United States.

The State Department does not know upon what Germany bases the allegation that there has been an unwarranted and deceptive use of neutral flags by Great Britain. Neither the department nor the British embassy has any definite information to verify the charge.

Ambassador Gerard will be asked by cable to send to the department the text of the decrees.

One authority suggested that Germany was shrewdly endeavoring to force neutral commerce into the North Sea routes so she can keep the English channel locked. This can be done without stopping or seriously interfering with the commerce to Holland, which Germany wishes to be free of interference.

The larger question of whether Germany's notice can be construed as a blockade has been decided against Germany already by the officials of the department. The United States will not regard a blockade by a few submarines as effective in international law.

Why is POSTUM Replacing Coffee?

People are waking up to the harmful effects of the powerful drug—caffeine—in coffee, which poisons the system, often resulting in nervousness, heart flutter, headache, biliousness and many other ills and discomforts.

The pure food-drink, Postum, is absolutely drug-free—made only of the choicest wheat and a bit of wholesome molasses. It contains no caffeine or other harmful elements.

If you doubt that coffee hurts you, a sure test is to leave it off for 10 days and use Postum. It's an easy change, too, for Postum tastes much like the mild, high-grade Javas. As the coffee-drug is eliminated from your system, your own feelings will suggest Postum and better health.

Postum comes in two forms: Regular Postum—must be boiled, 15c and 25c packages: Instant Postum—soluble form, made in the cup with hot water instantly, 30c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious, and the cost per cup is about the same.

CONFESSES TO BIG THEFT AT WIRTH'S

After confessing he had falsified the books of the Charles Wirth Restaurant Company and had probably taken about $25,000, Friedrich Stoltmann, manager of the restaurant for the past seven years, left his home in Jamaica Plain, Tuesday, and has not been seen since.

Mr. Wirth reported the case to the police of the Lagrange Street Station and they are searching for him, but they are of the opinion he has returned to his home in Germany.

Stoltmann was a trusted employe in the firm and his services were rewarded by Mr. Wirth placing his name on the liquor license, as a responsible person to manage the business during his absence.

AUDITORS BUSY ON BOOKS.

The missing manager kept the books of the company and manipulated the figures in such a manner that they were not discovered by auditors who inspect the records of the firm every six months.

During the absence of Mr. Wirth in Germany last Fall the books were not audited at the usual time. And before a recent auditing the changes had not been learned. Auditors are now investigating to learn where the money went.

In speaking of the case Mr. Wirth says: "For seven years he had been my friend and I could not imagine him appropriating my money. I was surprised when he told me Monday night and I discharged him immediately. He came to me Tuesday and wanted to settle the matter and I have not seen him since and he has left Jamaica Plain.

"I have no idea how much has been taken and will not know until the books have been audited, but he said he had taken about $25,000 or $25,000.

MAY HAVE SAILED HOME.

"Stoltmann was a man of moderate means and had no expensive tastes. Since returning from Germany I have heard of his telling many people I had left the firm. Bills which I supposed were paid, and marked as such on the books, I find I still owe, and how many there are will be determined probably today.

"Money which I supposed was in the bank I find has been taken out, and I don't know how much I have lost that way."

Stoltmann lived at No. 92 Wyman street, Jamaica Plain, and was a member of several organizations, including German societies and the City Club.

Harvard Man Weds Malden Girl Tonight

A fashionable wedding will be solemnized tonight at the First Universalist Church, Malden, when Miss Elizabeth Wheeler Spaulding of the Hotel Somerset, Malden, formerly of Oak Park, Ill., and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Richard Digby Sykes, pastor of the church, will officiate.

Firemen Save Many From New York Hotel

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—One hundred and fifty guests in the Hotel Schuyler, Nos. 57-63 West Forty-fifth street, fled to the street or were rescued by firemen when fire in the seventh-story business building next door drove them out of their rooms. Among those rescued was General Bingham, former chief of police, who, when aroused, cried for his artificial leg. "Where's my leg? Where's my leg?" he demanded. A fireman rescued it for him.

'Mayor' Coleman Delivers Sermon

At the conclusion of his first day as acting mayor, President George W. Coleman of the City Council, in an address on "Keeping an Equilibrium," at the Old South Church, declared he was in effect a sermon. "Balance between opposing good forces is the thing that helps me pick my way through the world," said Mr. Coleman. For a text Mr. Coleman selected what he termed "Potiphar's Parable."

Farrar in Boston Contract To Get $2,000 a Performance

Unusual photograph of Geraldine Farrar, Melrose girl who will tour United States in concerts.

Next season Geraldine Farrar, the girl who out the city of Melrose on the operatic map, will be paid $2,000 for every three hours' work.

This is the nearest financial estimate that can be made from the news today that Miss Farrar has signed an exclusive contract with Charles A. Ellis, business manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, for concert or opera, either one.

Her salary with the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York, with which she is about to conclude her eleventh successive season, is now $1,400 a performance Dispatches today from New York, which has been guessing fruitlessly at the situation, said that the prima donna had been raised $1,500 for next season, also that she would sing under Mr. Ellis' management in concert next season and with the Metropolitan in opera when the 1915-16 season begins.

But Mr. Ellis admitted today that he had an exclusive contract with Miss Farrar for "concert or opera," also that her salary would be over $1,500.

TO SING IN CONCERT AND OPERA.

It is known, however, that Miss Farrar's contract with Mr. Ellis calls for a flat $2,000 for each performance. Reckoning the average opera or concert performance at three hours' duration, it appears that the wonderful singer, who was formerly a little pigtailed girl in Melrose, now commands a song salary at the staggering rate of nearly a dollar per second.

New York reports collected today. One Manhattan newspaper said that the Metropolitan was to raise Miss Farrar's salary to $1,500 a performance and that she was one of the few Metropolitan artists whose money was not to be revised downward for next season under the Metropolitan's economy regime.

A second report had it that Miss Farrar was under Mr. Ellis' exclusive management, and that she would make a concert tour under the Ellis management.

Mr. Ellis was given the gist of the second story over the telephone today. He said:

"The New York story is true. I have a year's contract with Miss Farrar for next season. The contract is for concert or opera."

"Will Miss Farrar quit opera?" he was asked.

"My contract is for concert or opera," replied Mr. Ellis.

"Is she the highest paid woman singer in the world?"

"I don't know about that. I don't know the salaries of all the other woman singers."

When figures were mentioned Mr. Ellis said that the Farrar pay envelope will hold "more than $1,500" each performance.

"As much as $2,000?" he was asked.

"I'd rather not discuss that," said the new Farrar manager.

But it may be stated authoritatively, however, that the $2,000 figure is correct.

The question is still open as to whether Miss Farrar will sing in opera next season and whether she will be on the Metropolitan programs or not. Mr. Ellis merely refers to his phrase "the contract is for concert or opera."

BIG OPERA FAVORITE.

There is nothing in Mr. Ellis' statement to show that Miss Farrar may not be heard at the Metropolitan Opera House next season, but it is evident that the financial arrangements will rest between Mr. Ellis and the Metropolitan, not between the Metropolitan and the singer, as heretofore.

On account of the great demand in New York for Miss Farrar, who is a premiers favorite with opera patrons, it is inferred that she will be heard at the Metropolitan next season just the same, only she will cost the Metropolitan more money.

U. S. OWNERSHIP PLAN ON SHIPS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Deadlocked in the fight over the shipping bill, the Senate Democrats and the "allies" spent today in looking about for possible new moves to bring them the victory. The Senate did not meet, having recessed until Monday, but the Senators were at their offices and conferences from room to room were almost continuous.

The revelation of the day was the agreement of the Republicans to accept a straight-out government ownership and operation scheme under control of the Navy Department as a substitute for the Democratic measure.

This substitute, perfected by Senator Cummins of Iowa, provides that the Navy Department shall use $30,000,000 worth of Panama Canal bonds to purchase and construct vessels for a naval auxiliary and that in time of peace these vessels shall be operated by the department in the ocean-carrying trade of the United States.

The previous substitute offered by Senator Cummins provided that the vessels of the naval auxiliary should be leased out to private concerns.

Senator Cummins stated today that his new measure would command the entire Republican vote in the Senate as an alternative to the administration bill unless the latter should be so amended as to get the support of Senators Norris and LaFollette. He predicted, however, that the fight would continue indefinitely.

22 GIRLS HURT IN SLEIGH RUNAWAY

SPENCER, Feb. 6.—Twenty-two girls were so seriously injured as to require the services of a doctor and at least two have broken bones, as a result of the runaway of a big sleigh in which fifty girls had gone to Worcester in the theatre.

The runaway occurred at 1:30 a. m. today, when the sleigh was coming down Main street hill in Worcester. The pole broke, the four horses became frightened, and for half a mile galloped at top speed.

Fully half of the girls, in hysterical panic, jumped from the plunging sleigh and the injured were found in this number. At the end of half a mile Arthur Butler, who was driving, guided the horses into a post and stopped them with such a shock that the girls remaining in the sleigh were thrown out.

The two girls most seriously injured are:

Leah Collette, twenty, of Temple street, broken left arm.

Bella Davis, twenty, of Chestnut street, broken right ankle.

The team was owned by the Arthur Prouty Company, where most of the girls were employed.

Diplomats Plan to Leave Mexico

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—The withdrawal of many foreign legations at Mexico City is threatened owing to friction with the Carranza government.

'BUY IT NOW' HITS RIGHT NOTE

The "Buy It Now" movement is making a stir all over the country. It is starting from Boston on the Atlantic and is going to spread to the Pacific Coast. Governor Walsh has indorsed it and leading merchants and bankers in New England see in it just what is needed to insure great revival of trade.

Business is better, but it needs above all things else the stimulus of a great public demand. For many months the American people have been trying to get along on as small expenditures as possible. This has been largely psychological. The war in Europe has interfered with business in the Old World and forced a readjustment in the New World. The people of the United States have met and overcome every financial and commercial difficulty which came with the beginning of that conflict, and are now ready for Big Business. All that is necessary to bring about an era of real Prosperity in this country is for its inhabitants to resume living on a normal scale.

Every reader of the Boston AMERICAN can appreciate the great impetus to business that the "Buy It Now" movement will provide. Every one who takes a hand in it is a true patriot. There is just as much chance to be a patriot in time of peace as in time of war.

An idea is worth more at any time than a bullet.

What is your idea?

Write it to the "Buy It Now" Editor of the Boston AMERICAN. He wants all the letters he can get. His great revivifying question he can not. In the ideas of the people is all that inspires trade as well as government. Think over what can be done to get everybody with the cash to buy what they now really need. Then write what you think and be a soldier in the Good Times Army. Every bread line must be wiped out and every song kitchen closed. Most Governments are now trying to kill men. The American idea is to find jobs for them.

John J. Martin of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange indorses the "Buy It Now" movement. He says to the Boston AMERICAN:

"The BUY IT NOW movement is of vital importance to every man engaged in business, whether in banking, real estate, or in the staples we eat, drink and wear. We have nothing to do but all to do more than this movement to bring about prosperity, provided every citizen takes his part and joins the campaign to "Buy It Now."

Few persons are so badly off financially that they can not afford to spend a few hoarded dollars for something they very really need. This is what the effect on business in this country would be if every adult having the money were to purchase some needed article of household wear, or clothing, or whatever you will. If the sum spent were but a few dollars, business would be here. Good business would mean work for everyone that wanted it, and money to spend for comforts and luxuries and everything that goes with prosperous times.

I am glad to see that public officials, heads of commercial associations and business men generally are supporting this movement. It should have their support and that of every good citizen who is willing to do his share to make better times.

"Buy It Now" is a slogan that should be on the desk of every business man and above the door of every business house.

SLOGAN FOR EVERY BUSINESS MAN AND BUSINESS HOUSE

John J. Martin

The BUY IT NOW movement is of vital importance to every man engaged in business. GAS EXPLOSION IN CHARLESTOWN

An explosion of gas in a telephone conduit in City square, Charlestown, today injured one man and blew a heavy iron manhole cover through the platform of the Elevated structure, thirty feet overhead.

The injured man was Chester Elden of Malden, an employe of the New England Telephone Company. He was taken in a police ambulance to the Relief Hospital, where he was treated for wounds about the scalp and face.

The explosion caused great excitement in City square. The noise attracted hundreds to the spot. Fortunately there were no passengers on the Elevated platform at the time.

Elden was working at the time in a manhole a hundred feet to the west of the Elevated stairway. Employes of the telephone company had removed this cap. The explosion was laid to gas in the conduit.

The manhole cap made a hole several feet in diameter on the southbound platform of the "L" near the exit stairway. Ten feet above the hole the cap struck an iron girder and broke in several pieces.

YOUTH WHO SHOT BROTHER FREED

John H. Murphy, Jr., the thirteen-year-old Fields Corner boy who stabbed his brother, William, to death, while at the evening meal at their home, on January 28, was set free by the Suffolk County Grand Jury. A "no bill" was returned after the Grand Jury investigated the case. The boys had an altercation.

Among the seventy indictments returned before Judge Lawton was one of first degree murder against George Sprindakis, who, it is alleged, shot and killed Emmanuel H. Papadakis, proprietor of a store in the Back Bay on January 20.

Richard Vlandoor and James Conway who were charged in the lower court with having caused the death of Florence O'Sullivan, by shooting in a room on Waltham street, South End, on January 12 were released on $500 bail each, held on indictments charging breaking and entering and having burglar's tools in their possession. Ida Onyon, the girl found in the room with the men, was held on $1,000 bail to be a material witness for the government.

SAYS HE PUT OLD "OUT OF MISERY"

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—With four persons held in connection with alleged wholesale murde s in the German Old Fellows Home, near Yonkers, and other arrests in prospect, Coroner James P. Dunn of Westchester county today took steps to have the bodies of the victims exhumed.

A rigid and widespread investigation to begin made of the story of Frederick Moss, a former orderly in the institution, who is said to have confessed to Assistant District Attorney Murphy that he chloroformed aged inmates to put them out of their misery. Moss is detained in the psychopathic ward at Bellevue Hospital as a lunatic.

"They were so old they were a nuisance," Moss is reported to have said in his confession.

Adam Hampel, superintendent of the German Old Fellows Home, was locked up in the White Plains jail and two orderlies, Max Iling and Fritz Reicher, are being held as witnesses.

Frank Schmidt and Amelia Hounecope, the latter a fourteen-year-old girl who had charge of the medicine closet, were paroled by the authorities for further examination.

District Attorney Weeks of West Chester County said he would present the case to the Grand Jury next Monday. It was said that a warrant had been issued for Moss, but Mr. Weeks refused to reveal the charge.

"From my investigation so far I have decided that aged persons were put to death with chloroform," said Coroner Dunn. "At the time death occurred it was supposed to be natural causes."

The deaths all occurred within the last eight months.

FIND 'BOMB' NEAR BIG C. P. R. BRIDGE

A mysterious package, containing what the Canadian authorities at first believed was a nitro-glycerine shell, was found early today under a bridge across the St. John River, at St. John, N. B., according to dispatches from that city.

The discovery caused some excitement in St. John, the report being circulated that an attempt had been made to blow up the viaduct, which is known as the Old Suspension bridge. The bridge connects St. John with the town of Fairville, and runs close to the Canadian Pacific railroad bridge over the river. The first report from St. John said the package was found under the railroad bridge.

General Superintendent H. C. Grout of the Canadian Pacific was quoted as saying that he felt positive the package contained a quantity of nitro-glycerine. A dispatch this afternoon stated the package contained a "substance resembling a bar of tar soap. This was taken to the St. John police headquarters to be analyzed, and pending investigation the St. John authorities said they could not state whether it was a "bomb" or harmless material.

FOUND NEAR BRIDGE SUPPORT.

The "shell" was found enclosed in a harmless looking square paper package lying at the base of one of the granite supports of the suspension bridge. The discovery was made by Benjamin Godsoe, a night watchman placed as guard on the bridge by the provincial government of New Brunswick.

The "shell" was turned over to Chief of Police Simpson of St. John, who ordered an investigation to determine its contents.

Godsoe was standing near the stone pillars of the suspension bridge when he noticed a paper package lying in the snow against the western side of the pillar farthest upstream. It was a square paper package tied with a string. When he picked it up Godsoe took off the paper wrappings to see what it was. Inside he found something that looked very much like a cake of tar soap and was not much larger. Sticking out were two pieces of wire about two inches long.

Godsoe notified the chief of police in St. John. Chief Simpson and Commissioner McLellan took possession of the package.

Godsoe said that he had not noticed any suspicious character about the bridge during the evening.

The presence in Boston just before the Vancehoro explosion of mysterious foreigners, and the discovery that mysterious foreigners have been holding secret conferences which seemed to have for their object some designs against British property, assumed a sinister meaning, in the minds of the Canadian authorities.

The theory of a plot with strands reaching through perhaps several large eastern cities of the States, is believed also to account for an arrest made in New York.

Louis Kline, an Austrian, a real estate operator of No. 254 Roebling street, Brooklyn, was placed under arrest by Secret Service Agent Massey of Washington. The agent said he was acting under the orders of Chief William J. Flynn of the U. S. secret service. He turned his prisoner over to the Greenwich Street Police Station as a federal prisoner.

This Kline is charged with "conspiracy against United States laws." Massey refused to discuss his man, and would say only that the laws conspired against were not those against smuggling. Whether Kline is suspected of complicity in the explosion at the Vancehoro bridge, Massey also refused to say.

HORNE AT MACHIAS. BEGINS THIRTY-DAY SENTENCE IN JAIL

MACHIAS, Me., Feb. 6.—Werner Horne, the young German army officer, who was sentenced to thirty days in the Machias jail by Trial Justice Smith at Vanceboro Wednesday, for maliciously destroying property, arrived here at 7 o'clock last night. Upon his arrival he was immediately taken to the hotel for supper.

His appetite was not very good and when asked what he wanted he said:

"I am very tired, a cup of coffee will be enough."

After supper he was taken to the county jail. Here he was met by Sheriff Carter Woodman. The German shook hands with the sheriff and pleasantly said: "How do you do?" All of his belongings were taken from him, including the dag of the Fatherland which he took so much pride in showing at Vanceboro after the attempt to blow up the bridge across the St. Croix river.

On the journey from Bangor Horne was the object of much curiosity. At every station people gathered on the station platform to look at him.

He read the newspapers most of the way. The editorials on his case he studied very carefully. When asked if he had anything to say about them he replied:

"I will never go back to Canada."

Horne was at liberty to go and come while on the train. Deputy Sheriff George W. Ross refused to handcuff the German.

"Horne is a gentleman and I would trust him with my life," said the deputy sheriff. "I have no fear of his trying to get away."

The young German officer conversed very freely on the train with everyone who addressed him.

"Little did I think that I would be in this part of the country a few weeks ago. I have not seen so much snow for five or six years," he said on his way from the station to the hotel.

Sheriff Woodman has ordered extra guards placed around the county jail.

"I am not doing this on account of Horne trying to escape," the sheriff said, "but as a precaution. I am going to have the place well guarded."

HORNE MAY CLAIM IMMUNITY IN VIEW OF JAIL SENTENCE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—The action of Trial Justice George H. Smith at Vanceboro, Me., in sentencing Werner Horne to a month's imprisonment in jail at Machias on the charge of malicious mischief in connection with his attempt to blow up the Canadian Pacific Railway bridge, may introduce an element into the international aspect of the affair that will work to Horne's advantage. This attempt involves the question whether Horne, under the guarantees of the Constitution of the United States, can again be tried for his attempt to destroy the international bridge.

It is suggested here that the point might be raised, when the extradition papers are started that Horne could not be extradited because he had already been tried once for the same offence. Article V of the Constitution of the United States provides: "Nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb."

Under treaty arrangements between the United States and Germany Horne, as a German subject has a guarantee of the same rights under the Federal Constitution and laws as an American citizen.

While it was said in a well-informed quarter that such a claim might have merit, it was pointed out that the liberty of a person accused of an offence under the laws was not regarded as in jeopardy unless he was tried after indictment for a criminal offence by a jury, and the proceedings against Horne before a justice of the peace might not be considered as placing his liberty in jeopardy within the meaning of the Constitution.

Burton Holmes Tells of Germany-Austria

Burton Holmes continued last night his war-time-Europe series of travelogues, with "Germany and Austria." No subject could be more timely, as his colored views and motion pictures give a first-hand glimpse at these two important nations, their principal cities, towns and villages and their architectural, artistic and industrial phases, besides introducing many life-portraits in motion of the rulers of Germany and Austria and their daily life at home. In public ceremonials, and surrounded by their generals in camp and on the field of battle. Especially notable are many motion pictures of the Kaiser on board ship watching target practice, the exploding of mines and the evolutions of torpedo boat destroyers and submarines.

CARNEGIE HAPPY, ROCKEFELLER SHY AT INDUSTRIAL HEARING

broad-toed laced boots were freshly shined, and he revealed, when he hitched his trousers before sitting down, a patch of white socks.

His snow-white hair was tousled, but the white beard had been carefully trimmed. There was a ruddy glow of health in his round, full, wrinkled face. His eyes twinkled through a pair of steel-rimmed spectacles.

Turning to the great crowd of spectators, he smiled benevolently. He carried in his hand a folded manuscript. Mr. Carnegie was in willing witness and was in great good humor. He stood throughout the reading of his formal statement. His voice was clear and firm. He gesticulated frequently and occasionally pounded the table in front of him to emphasize his points.

CONTRAST WITH JOHN D.

The laughter following his final reply had barely subsided when a rear door near the stage opened and a tall, broad-shouldered, angular man slipped quietly, almost shrinkingly, into the room. He was the very opposite of the self-confident, debonair happy Carnegie. He was John D. Rockefeller.

His long, clean-shaven face was slightly pallid. His lips were tightly compressed. His eyes swept rapidly over the room and finally lighted upon the seven commissioners, to whom he bowed deferentially. Mr. Rockefeller was graver almost sad, where Mr. Carnegie had been vivacious and "chipper."

He did not smile once throughout his three-quarters of an hour on the witness stand. He remained seated. His voice was nervous at the start, but gained in volume as he proceeded. His hands trembled slightly, and he had difficulty all through in keeping his gold-rimmed glasses on his nose.

He wore a loose gray tweed sack suit, a high lay-down collar, a black four-in-hand tie, a green scarf pin, a black and white striped shirt and no jewelry or rings. His shoes were black, laced, with heavy protruding cork soles.

He was stately and deferential where Mr. Carnegie had been genial and chummy. He was slow, deliberate, and weighed his every word. By actual count, Mr. Rockefeller's answers were given at the rate of sixty words per minute. He was heard with intense silence.

BUSINESS "DOING GOOD."

On taking the stand Mr. Carnegie gave his name and his address in a clear voice, and when asked his business, replied:

"My business is to do as much good in the world as I can. I've retired from other business."

An instant later he bounded up, smiling broadly.

"I've prepared a statement. Mr. Chairman," he said, "following the example of the other gentlemen who have appeared before you, and I request permission to read it."

"Please do," said Walsh, and as the commissioner was about to resume himself the chairman of the commission continued: "You may stand if you prefer."

"I believe I will," responded Carnegie. "I like to stand. I am not much of an orator, but I like to be able to stand and face the people I am going to address."

Unfolding his manuscript, he adjusted his steel spectacles, and with another jerky bow and a broad smile he plunged into the reading of the statement.

AUDIENCE WAS COLD.

The calling of Rockefeller swept over the audience like an electric spark. There had been no previous intimation that he was coming. The news spread rapidly and fresh crowds began to pour into the room. When Mr. Rockefeller appeared the assembly room was jammed.

Mr. Rockefeller was brief, succinct, and—very reserved. Every eye was leveled upon him. On the front row of seats, a solid line of women, most of them avowed Socialists, faced him. Whereas Mr. Carnegie had faced from the beginning an audience which plainly felt his magnetism, the "coldness" of three-fourths of the spectators to Mr. Rockefeller was felt.

"My name is John D. Rockefeller," he said, in a low, slightly husky voice. "My legal residence"—he seemed to lay stress upon the "legal" since he has had a controversy with the city of Cleveland on the point—"is No. 4 West Fifty-fourth street, New York city. I am a retired business man. For twenty or twenty-five years I have had no active business life."

Mr. Rockefeller had also prepared a statement, which he read.

"If I do not read loud enough," he said, adjusting his eyeglasses with a trembling hand, "I could raise my voice if I was desired."

Directors, Mr. Rockefeller believed, "do not have any responsibility for labor conditions in a corporation. They did not know whether it was advisable that directors should receive reports on labor conditions. He would secret to all men, he said, the right to organize, "so long as they regard the law and the public in general."

"I believe the best way to help the laboring man," Mr. Rockefeller said, "is to give him good wages rather than have him become the object of charity.

"I think the stockholders of a corporation are responsible for the choice of the best men as directors," he said. "The directors are ultimately responsible for the general conduct of the business and in discharging the responsibility it is their duty to select the best men to actually administer it. These administrative officers must have initiative and power commensurate with their responsibility.

"FAITH IN THE PEOPLE."

"A large stockholder ordinarily would have more influence with a board of directors than a smaller one, and consequently it would have a greater responsibility for the selection of directors who would see to it that the administrative officers maintained proper working conditions for their employes."

Aside from the letter of gift transferring $100,000,000 to the Rockefeller Foundation, Mr. Rockefeller knew of no other deed to the money. He said he "had never worried" about the money reverting to himself or his heirs after his death in case the Legislature should revoke the charter.

"And I have great faith in the American people," he said. "In the people lies our protection."

Concerning his personal staff, he said:

"I have always tried to select clean young men with ambition to make their way in the world. From those young men I shall select the future heads of the business."

Mr. Rockefeller said he saw Starr J. Murphy of his personal staff about once a year. He had met Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard College, twice.

Mr. Rockefeller testified that he had never attended a meeting of the directors of the Rockefeller Foundation. He sometimes communicated with the directors through his son.

FOUNDATION MOTIVES.

"The sole motive underlying the various foundations which I have established has been the desire to devote a portion of my fortune to the service of my fellow men," he read from his prepared statement. "The principles have been fully set forth in two chapters from my book 'Random Reminiscences,' which have already been made a part of the record of your commission."

ANNA R. COHEN, of Roxbury, soon to be a bride.

A wedding of unusual interest in local Jewish circles will occur on February 23, when Miss Anna R. Cohen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wolf Cohen of No. 16 Rockland street, Roxbury, becomes the bride of Abe Hyman, a Boston wholesale clothing merchant. The ceremony will be performed by Rabbi H. H. Rubinowitz, of the Temple Mishkan Tefila, Roxbury.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of the Roxbury High School and a student at the New England Conservatory of Music. The groom-elect is well known and popular in Roxbury.

4 HAULS BY HOLDUP MEN AND THIEVES

Holdup men and thieves were busy during the night and four persons were their victims.

Three men held up Arvid T. Mobergman, a baker, in a vacant lot at No. 114 Ferry street, Everett, and robbed him of $20.

Moberger was on his way to his home at No. 243 Vine street, Everett. While crossing the lot three men ordered him to hold up his hands.

One of the men went through his pockets and took his money. As the three men made their escape they

Because a loaded revolver failed to frighten Peter Alfiontan, who manages a grocery store at No. 109 Elm Hill avenue, Roxbury, a man who attempted to hold him up is now minus a "haul" but also a revolver. The stranger entered Alfiontan's store and told him to hold up his hands. He put up his hands and quickly wrenched the revolver from the unknown man. He then fled.

Mrs. Philip Kirby of No. 7 Belmont street, Brockton, was robbed of a handbag by two men on Belmont street, near her home. They then pushed her into the alley leading to the factory, seized the bag and ran.

Burglars entered the home of Mrs. Mary Buchanan, No. 158 Fellsway West, Medford, and ransacked the house securing $26 in cash and five rings valued at $150.

Embroidery Outfit for All! Get It Now

"My, what a splendid Embroidery Outfit!"

That's what one woman said yesterday at the AMERICAN'S Pattern Department when she opened the big envelope which each splendid outfit comes in.

And no wonder! Ten thousand other women have already been similarly pleased with this remarkable embroidery "treat."

Think of it! Over two hundred patterns of every conceivable design, the very latest stitch selections, an all-wood beaded embroidery hoop of special clasp design (absolutely non-slip affairs); ten skeins of embroidery silk and floss in assorted colors, together with an instructive pamphlet on the various kinds of embroidery stitches, showing the beginner just how to proceed to master this daintiest of all arts.

An opportunity, indeed! And one that will not last much longer—the demand is so enormous.

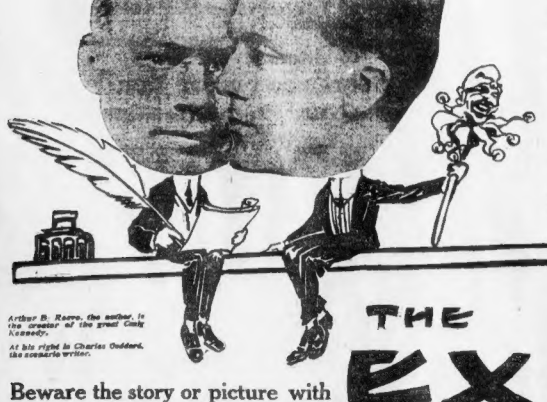
Full details of how to get this almost indispensable Embroidery Pattern Outfit will be found on the Magazine Page of this paper.

"Turn to it now—if you don't wish to be "too late."

$100,000 Fire in Pittsburg.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 6.—Fire started from an overheated coal stove today and destroyed the Old Southside Market House, with a loss of $100,000.

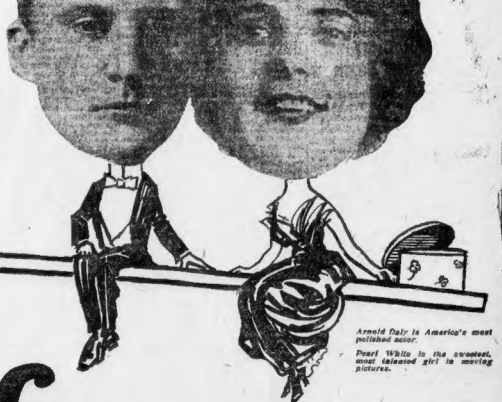
A PERFECT BALANCE



Arthur B. Reeve, the author, is the creator of the great Craig Kennedy.

At his right is Charles Goddard, the scenario writer.

Talent is well distributed here. As great as Arthur B. Reeve (the Cosmopolitan Magazine creator of Craig Kennedy), who writes the story, is Charles W. Goddard, the scenario author. As great as he (the playwright of the "Misleading Lady," the "Ghost Breaker," "Perils of Pauline," etc.) is Arnold Daly. It is he who plays Craig Kennedy, after his years of reputation as America's greatest actor. And as great as Arnold Daly is beloved Pearl White, who played "Pauline" and who now is "Elaine."



Arnold Daly is America's most polished actor.

Pearl White is the sweetest, most talented girl in moving pictures.

THE EXPLOITS OF ELAINE

Beware the story or picture with a single high spot, a feature out of balance, a fine play with poor cast, or a good story and weak pictures.

The "Exploits of Elaine" is uniformly good in every element.

The authors are America's best. The players are unsurpassable. The pictures are the most superb ever seen on the screen.

The "Exploits of Elaine" doesn't depend on mystery or sensation for its power (although mysteries are rampant everywhere.) It doesn't depend on scenic effects (although Pathe Freres have given us a classic in this particular.) It doesn't depend on artistic acting (although who is more artistic and forceful in characterizations than Daly, Lewis and Miss White?)

From every viewpoint, the "Exploits of Elaine" is the most pronounced success ever offered.

The stories are the most powerful since Edgar Allen Poe finished "The Gold Bug" or since Maupassant completed "A Piece of String."

Any woman who can read without experiencing that indescribable emotion of combined curiosity—love—fear—is a peculiar woman. Any man who can read without anger for the dastard, cheers for the detective, yearning for the heroine, is scarcely normal. Read the story in the

SUNDAY AMERICAN

HEART THROBS IN 'UNWED' LETTERS

Wages and economic conditions, lack of opportunities for young people to meet and get acquainted, fickle suitors, ambition, desire for independence and scores of other reasons for their remaining single are given by New England women who are writing to the AMERICAN to answer the queries put by a woman author in the current issue of Good Housekeeping as to why so many women are unwed.

These letters and their autobiographical notes throw interesting lights on a very timely topic. More of them will appear in the Sunday AMERICAN. Among the letters just received are these:

IT'S A TOUGH OLD WORLD.

Right Man Editor, AMERICAN:

Why are there so many unmarried women? Because in nine cases out of ten, marriage, instead of bringing the greatest happiness, brings the greatest misery. The happiness is all in novels. Marriage is a cure for love. Nine out of ten on both sides are worthless critters.

Because it is as much as a man can do to support himself, as the trusts and the unions raised the prices of the necessaries of life.

Because, in a few weeks, when the woman gets tired of married life or needs the money, she sues the husband for divorce and alimony and $5,000 counsel fees, or for separate support, and attaches everything he has and ruins him.

Because if the husband has any property, he cannot sell it without his wife's signature. She can ruin him by refusing to sign deeds. If she marries one who has nothing, everybody knows what the end will be. Riches and erudition and eyeglasses and the aroma of the sacred codfish are no recommendations for a woman.

Because every man who has anything is a mark for some woman. If she is not married to him, she sues him because he doesn't marry her, and if she is married to him she sues him for divorce. And still they propose to tax bachelors for failing to jump into the frying pan.

Because woman can support themselves now. They have, perhaps, more intelligence than men and fill positions more satisfactorily because, as a rule, they are more sober and industrious than men. Why should they want to work for life for their board and clothes and the abuse of their husbands, whose love is dead and buried in three weeks?

Because the laws are not just and equal. A man can be arrested for deserting his wife, but a woman cannot be jugged for leaving her husband. A man can be thrown in jail for failing to support his wife, but you cannot jail the wife for failing to maintain her husband in the style to which he has been accustomed. You can sue the husband for the wife's debts, but you cannot compel the wife to settle the husband's obligations. The husband ought to be able to make the wife pay alimony and counsel fees. Women are entitled to all the rights and should be subject to all the duties and obligations of the men.

Because of the Puritanical custom which prohibits speaking without an introduction, it is immodest on the part of the girl to speak first, and if the man takes the initiative he will be run in for "mashing" or "white slavery."

In short, because the laws and customs made by bigots and fools are not in accordance with the laws of nature.

HARD TO TELL.

Right Man Editor, AMERICAN:

I am sorry to say that I cannot distinguish a good woman from a bad one, and believe that there are 99 per cent. who will agree with me in this particular.

You know the old proverb: "The apple was not as good as it looked." You cannot say that I am a true and honest man until you have tried me. Nevertheless, I may not steal anything from you, and if I need a recommendation from you, you will undoubtedly say: "He was an honest man!" But you do not anticipate that "if will be as good as I was while employed with you. Indeed, this is a very delicate question of knowing the "right man," as well as the "right woman." We cannot judge by the appearance, but we do. The feathers make the bird.

I am thirty-three years old, and was born in France and have traveled thousands and thousands of miles and am still looking for the right one.

Your lady friend believes it would be of good advantage for women to propose as well as we do, and I presume that she is perfectly right. There should not be any distinction in a matter so delicate as this, as long as they are taking as much of a chance. Let the women also look after themselves in matrimonial affairs. They are more careful than the majority of men. They have (or are supposed to have) the best of heart feelings, and therefore, they will, perhaps, solve the delicate question of why there are so many perfectly good unmarried women in this country.

Send Work Now to Crippled Children

The printing, sewing, woodworking, basketry and cane-seating departments of the Industrial School for Crippled and Deformed Children, No. 241 St. Botolph st. (Telephone Back Bay 3647), are in need of orders, especially the three last-named departments.

In order to keep seven young men busy in chair caning, many chairs are required, and the usual number has not been reached this year. Chairs will be called for and returned within the city limits. The express will be paid one way on chairs from without the city.

The good ones are now ready in the shops, and orders for children's suits and dresses given now will be more promptly executed in the sewing department than will be possible later in the season. Nine young women must be kept busy here, for they, as well as the rest of the workers, are dependent on these orders for their support.

The management of the school asks that the public come to the aid of this charity and help to keep these departments open.

FREDDIE YELLE MATCHED TO BATTLE WALTER BUTLER BEFORE LAWRENCE CLUB

YELLE MATCHED UP TO BATTLE BUTLER

By JACK CONWAY.

NEW interest has been created in the local lightweight situation as a result of the spirited twelve-round bout between Frankie Mack and Walter Butler which was held in Lawrence one week ago last night. Mack was awarded the decision over his Beachmont rival, but was obliged to travel at top speed every minute he was in the ring in order to finish in front.

Butler made such a hit with the fans who witnessed the tussle that Jim Crilley has matched him to exchange punches with Freddy Yelle, the clever and hard-hitting Taunton lightweight, in a contest to be decided before the Unity Cycle Club on February 18.

Butler and Yelle should put up an interesting whirl. Both boys are aggressive and hard punchers. Yelle is also a skillful boxer, and this naturally gives him a slight advantage over Jetty Dowd's husky protege.

JIM BUCKLEY has a few kind things to say about "Gunboat" Smith in a New York interview. It is enough to say that as a fighter the gunner is one swell high diver. James also remarks that Eugene Corri is a joke as a referee, and should not be allowed to officiate at the Johnson-Willard bout. The talk about Corri refereeing the match is laughable and the yarn was probably given out merely to obtain a little free publicity. The referee for the tussle was undoubtedly decided upon weeks ago, but his name will not be given out until a couple of weeks before the date set for the bout. But back to friend Buckley. Here is what he had to say for himself, and the noble boxing game in general:

"I just signed articles for the floor to meet Mike Gibbons at the start. I only arrived in town and I had glad of the chance to meet Johnston so that I could force Gibbons to make good his bluff that he was willing to meet a hard hitter like the Gooner. You know he doesn't relish it at all. It's up to Mike now. I got a wire from Tommy Burns just now offering us a bout with McGoorty. told him we were ready for that baby too. Well fight anybody but Young Ahearn. I'll never fight him while Dan McKetrick has the reins. I'll stand on this like the Tower of London.

* * *

"SO Corri is going to referee the Johnson-Willard bout? Well, I must say I like that. Why Corri? Aren't there any honest referees in America? You know I'm not so strong for Corri. He has a great reputation for fairness, but I'll say right to his teeth that he will decide any way the fellows sitting in boxes at Ho did that to us.

"Just to show you my contempt for the honorable Corri, I will never let him judge a fight for one of my men. The decision he handed down against us in the Carpentier fight was a roaring outrage. It's a pretty state of affairs when Johnson can make all those promoters walk a chalk line. It's his wish that Mr. Corri serve. Jan't that rich?"

* * *

SPEAKING of Englishmen reminds us of a story which is told by a Boston newspaperman who was on the staff of a big New York press bureau when boxing was at the height of its popularity. This particular news agency required another reporter to "cover" sporting assignments. An Englishman applied for the position, and as he claimed that he was well posted in boxing, he was employed.

There was a big ring battle in Hoboken the first night he was on the job, and the editor assigned him to "cover" the story. He informed the Englishman that it would be necessary for him to have his story written by 12 o'clock at the very latest, as the news bureau made a specialty of supplying morning papers with accounts of all the big news stories of the day.

THE honorable scribe returned to his office shortly after 11 o'clock and started to "grind" out his story on a perfectly good typewriter. As he had not submitted any copy at 12 o'clock, the editor in charge asked him to hurry and rush his story. "I can't do that, sir," he replied. "It was a ballyhoo fight, and I intend to write it in my own way." He then resumed his work, and as the hour hand of the clock neared 1, the editor wrote a short account of the bout and sent it over the wire. The Englishman was still writing when he had completed describing the first two rounds by this time. He was still busy when the office boy left at 4 a. m. His article, when completed, was a classic, but could not be used in any but a monthly magazine.

The same reporter was told the following night to write a human interest yarn about a ring tussle which he witnessed that evening. He replied, "When the winner entered the ring he looked like a German, but when he crawled out of the ring he resembled a slaughterhouse."

And then the dear old can rattled.

OFF DAY FOR BIG LEAGUE BOWLERS

By J. P. MURPHY.

ONE of the leading mercantile bowling teams that will bear watching is the Queen Quality aggregation of Jamaica Plain. This quintet has rolled some of the best teams in the State this season, and has met defeat only once, that at the hands of the crack Chauncy "wrecking crew," leaders of the City League.

* * *

THE Queen Quality team is composed of H. Lawrence, J. Stumpf, A. Davis, M. Broderick and G. Pagle. They stand ready to meet any mercantile team in the State, one match to be rolled on their own alleys and one on those of their opponents. Address Queen Quality Recreation Committee, Thomas G. Plant Company, Jamaica Plain.

* * *

STANLEY WILSON and Raymond Smith of Somerville challenge any tandem team in Greater Boston, providing hotbern and said team are not over twenty-one. Write to H. A. Gillette, Elm Grove alleys, Somerville.

* * *

THE Furniture League race has simmered down to a battle between Osgood and Atkinson. The other teams have little chance. Osgood has three points the better of Atkinson to date, but the latter is moving along steadily after one of the worst slumps it ever encountered.

* * *

FORD is beginning to pull away from the field in the Automobile League. Hume clung hard and long, but it looks as if the pace has grown too hot for Ford is now eight points in the lead.

* * *

TRUE to their name, the Wild Cats are making a runaway of the North Shore race. They've opened up a very comfortable margin on the Revere Braves, their nearest competitors.

* * *

DE SOTO-BEACON will make its last appearance of the season in the Suburban L. of C. League on next Tuesday evening. A team from another lodge has agreed to finish the remaining matches. De Soto-Beacon is in last place, having won but eight points in seventy-two.

* * *

PYTHIANS are taking particular interest in the Suburban race which has developed into a corking three-cornered affair. Marathon and Washington broke even in their contest meeting and are still tied for first place. While Webster is trailing only three points behind.

* * *

THE Webster quintet will try hard to win from Washington when they meet on Tuesday evening, as a clean sweep might land it in first place. Marathon meets the redoubtable Milton team and will certainly have to go some to win, as the latter seems to take particular delight in upsetting the dope.

* * *

ONE of the most loyal bowling rooters hereabouts is the "little fellow" who trails the Chauncy team wherever it goes. Said rooter has never been known to miss a City League match in which Chauncy has engaged. When a score is watched the matches from his own pet seat and gets to the alleys of combat one and two hours before the start.

* * *

THE B. & A. rollers from Springfield will invade the Dewey Square alleys this afternoon with the intention of carrying off the scalp of the Boston aggregation. In the evening the Springfield delegation will be dined at the City Club.

* * *

ZERWITZ and Ralph, eighteen, year-old champions of Springfield, defeated George Arafe and Charlie Benning of this city in a twenty-string match, the concluding ten strings of which were rolled at the Victory alleys, Springfield.

* * *

THE Ashmonts and Codmans will roll their "rubber" match for the championship of Dorchester, at the American alleys.

DEAL MAY LAND IN KANSAS CITY

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 6.—Charlie Deal may not be sent to the Ft. Louis Federals, as announced. Deal or another third baseman from the National League, rated as well, will be with the Kansas City club. This is the statement of James A. Gilmore, president of the organization, in a telegram received by Charles Madison, attorney for the Packers.

President Gilmore did not want the name of the other player made public, but he batted a whole lot better than the Boston third-baseman, and decided about as well. While there is nothing certain about which one the Packers will get, it will be one of these, and it is likely that Manager Johnson East so that he could not jump back to the Los Angeles club.

This is the second shortstop Stovall has taken from the Los Angeles outfit in two seasons. He signed Goodwin last Spring and the owners of the Angels threatened to bring suit to recover the youngster.

MICHIGAN'S IDEA OF SUMMER BALL

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Feb. 6.—That the University of Michigan is ready and anxious to take a stand for Summer baseball is indicated by the fact that the board, in control nominations, at the meeting last Saturday night, expressed themselves heartily in favor of the attitude taken by Professor Whitney.

The chairman of the Wolverine board publicly expressed his view that Summer baseball should be recognized, or college ball abolished. Although the Michigan authorities do not feel that conditions are any worse here than elsewhere, they are dissatisfied.

The Summer baseball problem is difficult of solution because there is no intercollegiate association, as the other sports. Michigan, being aloof from the western conference, and there being no organization of college teamers in the east, is in a hard position to take the initiative.

The Wolverines are going to try to accomplish something, however and overture will probably be made to Michigan's principal opponents to form an association to grapple with the problem, or at least hold a meeting of athletic representatives to consider it.

Michigan does not believe in countenancing a practice which is deceitful, and it is hinted by a member of the Wolverine board in control that the Mid-gan baseball eligibility rules are as to modified in so far as baseball is concerned.

Amateur and semi-professional Summer baseball is not regarded as harmful by the Michigan players themselves, and they fail to see why they should not be allowed to use their skill.

The point out that in both bowling and shooting, which are regarded as the two great amateur sports, cash prizes are the customary thing. Coach Langdon, for diplomatic reasons, has refused to state his position, but it is likely that he sympathizes with the false position of his men.

BOWLING PRIZE ROLL-OFF TONIGHT

The Dewey Square alleys tonight will be the stage setting of the Boston AMERICAN'S great weekly bowling rolloff. The prizes for the third week will be awarded after the ten leaders have each bowled a single string.

The usual bunch of fans will be on hand to cheer, as the bowlers have been educated to know that there is plenty of excitement at one of these affairs.

"Mel" Turner, manager of the Dewey Square alleys, who is one of the most ardent workers in the success of the tournament, will conduct the rolloff in real championship style.

He will have new pins set up.

He will have a man on the line to see that foul line rules are enforced.

He will have a man on the pins to see that they are properly spotted.

This rolloff will be the last of the ten man matches.

Next week there will be twenty bowlers competing. That should furnish a little more excitement. That will not make tonight's clash any the less exciting, however. There will be a full house when the contestants start their battle promptly at 8 o'clock.

Here are the ten who will roll, also the five next in the lists. If any of the leaders fail to show the alternates may have a chance to get in on the awards.

Bart Sullivan Has Had a Big Season

WORCESTER, Feb. 6.—Too much credit cannot be given Bart Sullivan for the work of the Holy Cross basketball team this Winter. His rivals teams, varsity and freshman, came home winners in the recent Intercollegiate American meet, while Joe Higgins captured the first leg of the Mayo Curley cup.

As the race with the Boston College next Saturday at the B. A. A. games will be nothing more than a runaway affair for the Purple, it is hoped that the manager of the armory games at Providence will be able to match a suitable opponent with Bert Sullivan's fliers.

Hayes Beats Bedly in 'Come-Back' Bout

CAPTAIN HALPIN OF B. A. A. THREATENS TO QUIT TRACK AFTER BIG MEET TONIGHT

STARS OF ATHLETIC WORLD READY FOR B. A. A. MEET TONIGHT

FEATURE EVENTS AND MEN TO WATCH AT B. A. A. MEET

40-Yard Dash—Fred Burns, B. A. A.
600-Yard Run—W. J. Bingham, Harvard; D. S. Caldwell, B. A. A.
Three-Mile Run—Hannes Kolehmainen, I. A. A. C.; Nick Grennakopolus, Miltrose A. A.
1,000-Yard Run—Joseph T. Higgins, Holy Cross; C. L. Speiden, Cornell; A. R. Alvini, I. A. A. C.
45-Yard Hurdles—J. J. Elder, I. A. A. C.
Running High Jump—A. W. Richards, Cornell; J. O. Johnstone, Harvard.
Shotput—Pat McDonald, I. A. A. C.; J. C. Lawler, I. A. A. A.
Three Standing Jumps—Platt Adams, N. Y. A. C.; E. L. Emes, Bronx Church House.
Hunter Mile—J. A. Power, B. A. A.; W. F. Gordon, N. Y. A. C.

All roads for track athletic lovers lead to Mechanics Building, where the B. A. A. is holding its annual meet tonight, and in which is entered stars from every big club and college in the East.

Joe Loomis, the sensational all-around athlete from Chicago, will not compete. He notified the B. A. A. today that he would be unable to take part in tonight's games on account of pressing business.

The meet may mark the passing of Tom Halpin as a competing athlete. Halpin recently acquired a big garage in Mattapan square, and as it is a big proposition in connection with the many other ends of the automobile business he has undertaken, the elongated captain of the Tricorn track team is thinking seriously of retiring from athletics.

Halpin's loss, coming at this time, not only would be a great loss to the Boston Athletic Association, but to the sport itself, as he has displayed greater speed in his recent trials than at any time in his brilliant career.

LESLIE AFTER HUNTER MILE.

The Hunter mile, one of the feature events, promises to be even more closely contested than was anticipated, and the added interest has been caused by the announcement that Sid Leslie of the Long Island A. C. of New York will be a starter.

With a round half dozen of the foremost mile runners in the East in the competition, therefore, it should not be a great surprise if Oscar Hedlund's wonderful record of 4m. 23 2-5s., established three years ago, is shattered.

Jimmy Howar, the crack B. A. A. athlete, is primed for the event, and when Power is at his best is required pretty near to lower his colors.

Willie Gordon of the New York A. C., another entrant, will start a great favorite, since he has been touted by New Yorkers as one of the best milers of the east.

Mike Devanney, also of New York, but who is running unattached, competed in the race for the Hunter trophy last year, and although he did not win he completed the long 5 laps that he was all that was claimed for him.

HARD RACE FOR FRESHIES.

Jimmy Burke of the B. A. A. and Elliott Bosworth of Dartmouth are the other two contestants, and either is likely to upset the calculations of the experts.

Burke has always been a consistent performer in this event, and for this race he has been carefully groomed.

Bosworth, even as a schoolboy, has always displayed championship qualities, and this season he has been doing unusually well at his favorite distance.

Notwithstanding that the Harvard freshmen relay team will be second choice against the Yale youngsters, there are some Crimson supporters who look for the '18 team to win.

The Yale freshmen, however, are a fast lot, practically the entire team possessing varsity caliber right now.

Williams, Walker, Orr and Rolfe comprise a combination that is capable of offering sturdy competition to any of the older college aggregations, and the Harvard boys make a creditable showing they will have reason to feel satisfied.

GISSING IN COME BACK STUNT.

The efforts of Harry Gissing, of the Irish-American A. C. will be closely watched. Gissing, once the rival of Mel Sheppard for the title of "handicap king," will essay a "come back" stunt in the 600-yard handicap, and has been placed on scratch with Bingham, Udwell and White of Yale.

He will also run on the I. A. A. C. relay team against B. A. A.

One of the interesting features of the 600-yard run will be the fact that Sheppard will be allowed a fourteen-yard handicap, almost half the allowance.

It is the first time that "Shep" has ever received any favors from the New England handicapper.

In all his other Boston appearances he has been scratch, and rightly enough, he never won an indoor race in Boston.

The principal Harvard entries in the B. A. A. classic are the three relay teams, two varsity and one freshman.

HARVARD HAS THREE RELAYS.

On the varsity short distance team matched with Cornell, Captain Frank Capper and Bill Bingham are the standbys.

Mr. Willcox, who has learned to take the corners better, is picked for a third place. The other line between Bingham, Howar and H. W. Moore.

Capper and Bingham will also run on the long-distance varsity team against Yale in a feature event.

The freshman four, running each 220 yards, will be made up of V. P. Liking, D. Little, E. E. Silver and R. U. Whitney.

The team is below the usual run of freshman relays and has not shown much speed in trials, so unless the freshmen from Yale also have an off year the honors in this race are unlikely to stay at home.

"The Rabbit's Column"

By Walter J. Maranville, SHORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

The Rabbit's Manager Contest closes tonight.

The idea, which I put forward just as a little flyer, to amuse the readers of this column, has proved to be a tremendous success.

Hundreds of letters from contestants are still coming in on every mail.

It will take time to go over them all and pick out the winner, so the contributors must be patient. I will announce the winner just as soon as possible.

* * *

Every day or so it is announced that one of the European armies has begun a new drive.

These drives are almost always to come after two are out and none on the bases.

* * *

A good, old, clean-up pinch hitter might win that European game.

* * *

According to estimates recently given out, the Chicago White Sox were among the few clubs that made any money last season. They were supposed, despite their lowly position in the race, to have cleared $70,000.

Such is the reward of popularity—the way the public crowds the coin on Charlie Comiskey. If he made $70,000 he could afford to give $50,000 for Eddie Collins, put the other $20,000 in his pocket and sit back sure of a tremendous season in 1915.

The fans will furnish input en masse to see the White Sox, reinforced by Eddie Collins.

* * *

E. S. Langraff, one of the men who wanted the Feds to finance a new minor league in New England, was in New York while the American League meeting was in session. He is quoted as saying that the plan had been abandoned. "We had plenty of wind and grub when the Feds met us in New Haven last week," he said, "but when we learned that they wouldn't put up the dough for us we decided to quit."

* * *

I hear that Dick Rudolph, who is some pitcher if anybody should ask you, is to appear for a week as a Boston theatre star. I will bet that Dick works with his cap on.

* * *

Manager Bill Carrigan of the Red Sox says he plans to start the season with Harold Janvrin at second base. Carrigan says Janvrin is one of the most remarkable fielders of the game, but that he has suffered because of the fact that he was born and raised in Boston.

* * *

President Lannin of the Red Sox said at the New York meeting that he offered Outfielder Rehg to the New York club too cheaply.

"I hope New York will not hold me to my promise," he said. "As a matter of fact I stand ready to give $500 to recall the option."

It is understood that Rehg cost the Red Sox a pot of money when they bought him from the American association. With Speaker, Hooper and Lewis playing regularly, Rehg never had much of a chance with the Red Sox. They say he is a good one, and if this is so a change to New York ought to give him his opportunity to shine.

* * *

Though nothing definite has been announced, it is believed that Duke Farrell will act as batting coach for Manager Donovan at Savannah. The Duke did excellent work in this line for the New Yorks under Stallings in 1909. Later he helped with the Red Sox at Hot Springs.

* * *

President Gilmore of the Feds has announced in Chicago that Pitcher Cy Falkenberg will wear a Brookfad uniform this year. The owners of the Indianapolis Feds, on the other hand, declare that Falkenberg will remain in their employ no matter what Gilmore says. Now where will Falkenberg play?

Although he has parted with Eddie Collins, Bender and Plank, Connie Mack is apparently at ease. The former manager of the Athletics talked in this vein yesterday:

"I'll have a good ball club just the same. Lajoie's batting will help us and we've got a fine lot of pitchers in Shawkey, Bush, Wyckoff, Pennock and Bressler. I do not say that we will win the pennant, but you can bet that our team will be high up in the race.

"After we reach the training camp I will decide whether to play Lajoie or McInnis at second base. I still have Baker, Barry, Murphy, Oldring, Strunk, Walsh, Lapp and Schang, so that the fans must not make the mistake of counting us out of the race."

KID COTTON WINS OVER AL KUBIAK

MANCHESTER, N. H., Feb. 6.—Al Kubiak of New York and "Kid" Cotton, the colored heavyweight, put up a fierce 15-round battle before a big crowd at the Granite State A. A., the decision going to the colored man, who had Sam Langford in his corner.

Kubiak held his own for the first three rounds, but from the close of the third until the eleventh it was all in favor of Cotton, who dropped his man twice, once for the count of nine.

The New Yorker came back strong in the last four rounds and all but evened the long lead which his opponent piled up.

In the semi-finals Kid McLeod of Berlin and Jack Mansfield of Lawrence gave a brilliant exhibition, the latter having quite a shade the better of it and was given the award.

A six-round preliminary was won by Brooks Harrison of Lawrence, who knocked out Jack Dyer of Concord in the fourth round.

Clarke Reaps Rich Harvest in Wheat

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 6.—Word has reached here that Fred Clarke, manager of the Pirates, has "cleaned up" between $20,000 and $30,000 in a wheat deal. Clarke, who is a Kansas farmer during the off season, is in partnership in a flour mill.

Some months ago Clarke anticipated the big rise in wheat and he and his partner loaded up with about 200,000 bushels. The average profit per bushel is figured around 20 cents, so Clarke and his partner have made a total profit of between $50,000 and $60,000.

Bill to Pension Stars of Diamond

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Feb. 6.—The secret of Assemblyman "Jimmy" Byrne, veteran baseball catcher, being a lawmaker was disclosed when he introduced a baseball players' pension bill.

He would have the State create a permanent disability benefit and annuity fund to be made up of gifts and bequests given especially to the fund for the retirement of ball players.

New Hageman Trial in Boston Club Suit

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The Appellate division has reversed a judgment of the Supreme Court and ordered a new trial in the case of the Baseball Players' Fraternity against the Boston American League club. The fraternity sued on the assigned claim of Pitcher Kurt (Casey) M. Hageman for money due on a contract. The complaint was dismissed by Justice Donnelly upon motion of the defending clubs' attorney.

'HeinieZim' Must Pay $40 a Week to Wife

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—Sitting with the bleachers yesterday at a little "separation game" umpired by Supreme Court Justice Brady, "Heinie" Zimmerman, star baseman of the Cubs, was hit by what he termed a "foul." Justice Brady ordered him to pay his wife $30 a week from October 15 to March, and $40 a week the rest of the year. Mrs. Zimmerman charged cruelty and non-support. She and "Heinie" makes $7,000 a year.

Glover and Briggs in 10-Round Draw

At the Only Social and Athletic Club of North Abington Mike Glover of Boston and Hayward Briggs of Brockton went ten rounds to a draw. Dave Powers of Malden knocked out Peck Le Favour of Brockton in the second round. Young Clancy of Brockton got the decision in six rounds over Kid Thomas of New York.

Special Trophy for Best Girl Athlete

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—For the first time in the history of athletics in the New York public schools there will be interschool competition among the girls for a trophy.

Although the rules of competition have not been adopted, it is planned that in addition to the athletic tests, each girl will have to perform some feat in swimming or basketball, or take a long walk.

BIG TENNIS MATCH LOST TO NEWPORT

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The national lawn tennis championship tournament for 1915 has been awarded to the West Side Tennis Club of this city at the meeting of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association.

Miss Larry Schlafly of the Buffalo Feds has made Krichell a proposition to sign with the Feds, but he has to write to another team on the circuit if he desires.

Duke Farrell Signs with the Yankees

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The New York American League club has signed Charles (Duke) Farrell as coach for the club to develop young pitchers. Farrell held a similar position with the Yankees in 1910 and 1914, and also was employed as coach for the Boston Americans in 1912.

Boston Man Honored by Skating Union

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y. Feb. 6.—At the annual meeting of the International Skating Union, held here, the members honored W. T. Richardson of Boston by electing him third vice-president.

He has been identified with the sport for several years, and has been president of the New England Skating Association. He also was connected with the Boston Arena, the Hub's big ice palace.

Brother Against Brother will be one of the features of the game tonight at the Arena when the Laval University team clashes with the Arena Hockey Club.

Yvon Gaudet of the Arena Hockey Club will play against his brother Aurele of Laval University.

The Laval team is a rocking good aggregation and the locals figure they have their work cut out.

The McGill University team, which played Harvard, was sent down to an 8 to 2 defeat at the hands of Laval three weeks ago.

Patsey Sequin, captain of the Arena team, who was badly injured in the B. A. A. match Tuesday night, will play tonight.

Panneton has been equipped with a big nose guard, which furnishes ample protection to the wound on his lip.

If the Laval team is agreeable there will be troubadistion tonight. This should serve to speed up the game.

Corri Will Not Referee Big Bout

EL PASO, Feb. 6.—Eugene Corri, referee at many international boxing bouts of London, will not referee the Johnson-Willard fight in Juarez.

Corri's demand that Carter wanted too much money. He said the referee possible would be Frank Noble, a sporting writer of San Antonio, Tex.

Curley had nothing to say relative to whereabouts or its possible time of arrival in Juarez of Jack Johnson.

Federals on Trail of Catcher Krichell

TORONTO, Feb. 6.—Paul Krichell, the Toronto catcher, who led the International League in batting the greater part of last season, is considering an offer to jump to the Federal League.

Max Carey Schlafly of the Buffalo Feds has made Krichell a proposition to sign with the Feds, but he has to write to another team on the circuit if he desires.

TWO BRAVES STILL AMONG UNSIGNED

Leslie Mann and Bert Whaling are the only unsigned members for the season of 1915.

Mann is still considering the proposition President Gaffney made him several weeks ago, and as the Feds are not faring all over themselves, as Mann expected they would, it is very likely he will sign up when he finds he has no place to play.

Whaling's contract was sent to Los Angeles, Cal., and it is possible that he is away from home, so that the failure to receive a signed contract here has no significance.

Odie Hess, the big southpaw pitcher, who can play a fine game at first base, and who is among the heavy hitting pitchers of the major leagues, has signed for this Summer.

Mother a Girl's Best Confidante

She Is the One Who Will Keep Your Secrets Sacred, Says Inez Plummer

"A GIRL should take as much care in the selection of her confidante as she does in the selection of a new gown, or perhaps a young man whom she hopes to marry," says Inez Plummer, the dainty and charming leading woman of the "Too Many Cooks" company at the Plymouth Theatre. "The fault with a great many girls is that they make promiscuous selections among girl friends, and confide in them certain things which, in many instances, I may say, are sacred, and ought to be kept wholly to themselves. One of the chief reasons that the sterner sex has always entertained the suspicion of ridicule among women has been their inability to keep a secret.

"The best confidante that a young girl can choose is her mother. She is the one who will love, cherish, guide and teach her the best of things, and above all, the young girl can safely open her heart to her. I think the reason that many more girls do not confide things in their mothers is because they feel that the mother has passed the age of activity. This fact is a detrimental wrong, and the sooner girls find it out the more they will profit thereby.

"Of course," says Miss Plummer, "there are those girls who can keep a secret. These girls will never tell it to anyone else. Consequently, the best way to find out whether a girl can keep a secret or not is to ascertain whether she ventures to confide in you what she determines a secret."

Despite her apparent youth, Miss Plummer has achieved a successful stage career. Her parents intended her to take up painting and after almost qualifying herself in this artistic capacity, Miss Plummer found herself unable to resist the call of the footlights, and made her stage debut when seventeen years old.

Then He Understood

"How will you have your hair cut, sir?" said the talkative barber to the victim in the chair.

"Mining conversational prolixity," replied the patient.

"What?"

"With abbreviated or totally eliminated narrations."

"What?"

"Without effervescent verbosity."

"Sir?"

"Let even diminutive colloquy be conspicuous by its absence."

The barber scratched his head thoughtfully a second, and then went over to the proprietor of the shop and whispered:

"I don't know whether that man in my chair is mad or a foreigner, but I don't make out what he wants."

The proprietor went to the customer and said, politely:

"My man don't seem to understand you, sir. How would you like your hair cut?"

"In silence."

The proprietor gave a withering look at his assistant, who felt so utterly crushed that he never asked the man if he'd buy a bottle of hair restorer.

Up-to-Date Jokes

'Twas holiday time, and the gudeman had had an enjoyable round of jocular pleasure, which his better half strongly disapproved of.

"Look here," she began, "on every stomach there are three coats, and excessive indulgence in alcoholic liquors wears those coats away."

"Well, Susan," he replied, "if that's o my poor old stomach has been going about in its shirt-sleeves a long time now."

During a marriage ceremony in Scotland recently the bridegroom looked extremely wretched, and he got so fidgety, standing first on one foot and then on the other, that the "best man" decided he would find out what the trouble was.

"What's up, Jock?" he whispered. Hae ye lost the ring?"

"No," answered the unhappy one, with a woeful look, "it was a bit safe enough; but, man, I've lost ma enthusiasm."

A Man and His Wife

A Real Row Follows Isabel's Anxiety for Her Husband and His Midnight Return

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water.

CHAPTER V.

Copyright, 1913, Star Company.

JOHN HAMILTON gasped when he saw his wife—and the gasp was one of alarm and consternation. She was at that moment a sight to bring anxiety to the breast of any loving husband, especially when he had supposed her to be slumbering sweetly and had let himself into the apartment softly that he might not disturb her. She looked very slender as she stood in the centre of the little hall, the folds of her pale-blue dressing gown falling loosely about her, her fair hair hanging dishevelled over her shoulders, her face pale, her eyes wide and startled.

"Good Heavens!" John exclaimed, hurrying to her. "What's the matter? Are you ill?"

"No," she replied with hauteur, "I am not ill. But I've been terribly anxious."

"What about?" John asked. "Did you hear some sound that frightened you?"

"Some sound!" she repeated dramatically. "No—no sound but the clock striking away the hours while I lay awake in an agony of fear about you."

A sudden light broke upon the man's mind. "About me!" he laughed. "You silly girl! What could have hurt me?"

She drew from him when he would have put his arm about her. "I trusted you enough," she accused, "to believe that something must have happened to you to keep you away so long."

"Poor child!" he sympathized. "It was inconsiderate of me to stay so late. I supposed you would be fast asleep. I was only over at the club."

"Oh, I know where you were," she interrupted him. "When I found out what time you left there I stopped being anxious about you."

"How did you find out?" the husband asked quickly.

"I telephoned the club," the wife said. She regretted the admission she had made, but since she had said so much she must answer Jean's query truthfully. She saw him flush with annoyance and mortification.

"Do you mean," he said, "that you actually called up the club to ask about me as if I were a small boy out alone after dark?"

His vexation added to her grievance, yet it steadied her nerves, and the voice in which she replied was cold and firm.

"As I am your wife, I had a right to know where you were," she asserted. "I prefer not to discuss the matter further."

SHE BEGS HIM NOT TO GO AGAIN TO THE CLUB.

She went into her room, but he followed her, watching her sombrely as she took off her wrapper and lay down in her bed. At last he spoke.

"Isabel," he said, "I think it is as well for us to understand each other here and now. I am a man, and I have a man's right to go and come as I please. It would be well for you to remember this and spare yourself the discomfort of anxiety every time I am out late."

His words filled her with a sudden panic, and she forgot her dignity.

"Oh, John," she quavered, sitting up and looking appealingly at him—"you don't mean that you are going to the club again—I mean again, soon?"

He was sorry for her; then the recollection of her having called his friends up at the club, of her having put him in a ridiculous light, transformed his pity to disapproval. He remembered George Dawson's laughing remark. Perhaps it was George himself who answered the telephone.

"Who answered you from the club?" he questioned.

"I don't know." Isabel replied. "It was some man whose manner I don't like. He sounded as if he was making fun of me."

"He probably was," John affirmed bitterly. "And he was probably making mere fun of your husband. Please consider that the next time your foolish fears make you forget what is due me. It is humiliating for a man to have his wife follow him up."

"John," she said, moved by her memory of the evening's fears and loneliness, "won't you say that you're not going to the club often?"

"No! I'll make no such silly promise!" he declared.

To his consternation Isabel burst into tears. He thought at first he would let her cry, but the sound of her sobs was too much for his equanimity. Seating himself on the bed by her, he put his arm around her.

"Dear," he pleaded, "don't cry. You are all upset and nervous. If you will just make up your mind to be sensible and understand that an evening's absence does not mean lack of love—Don't be unreasonable!" he added as her sobs continued.

She looked up at him and her tears stopped flowing. "Do you call it unreasonable to hate to be left alone for an entire evening? Would you call it unreasonable if you objected to my going away with a friend and not coming in until after midnight?"

WHY NONE OF US CAN HELP BEING VEGETARIANS.

Even though our diet consists almost wholly of animal food, vegetable matter is really at the bottom of it, as Dr. Leonard Keene Hirshberg explains in this very interesting article.

SEE SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

"That is very different," he objected. "You are a woman."

"That's not my fault!" she burst forth. "And even if I am a woman, I have some rights, I suppose."

A SCENE FOLOWS IN WHICH SHE WEEPS

John Hamilton sprang to his feet. "Great Scott!" he ejaculated. "Of all unreasonable beings that ever lived commend me to your sex! I try to comfort you, and you find fault with me. And what is it all about, anyway? Just because I, after six months in which I have spent every evening with you, went over to the club and sat until 12 o'clock talking with some old friends. My mistake has been that I did not do it long ago—for then you would have been used to it by now. But I shall go whenever I please. Understand? And now as I am too much upset to even attempt to sleep for hours yet, I shall go into the parlor and read and try to forget this infernal row. I advise you to try to calm yourself and get some rest—even if I cannot."

He did not see how absurd it was for him to drop a husbandly kiss on the top of her bowed head after this tirade. Nor did the woman see that it was absurd. There are so many such travesties in married life—so many such funny things that happen every day—and so few people have the sense of humor to perceive that they are funny!

After having wounded his wife's feelings, and followed the wound by a kiss that was not prompted by affection and which she was too wretched to notice, John Hamilton turned out Isabel's light and left her alone in the dark.

The altercation of the morning had been nothing to this, the wife thought, as she sobbed herself to sleep. After all, they were just like other married people, and she had supposed they would be entirely different.

Smart Paris Street Costumes

(Republished by Special Arrangement with HARPER'S BAZAR, the Oldest and Greatest Woman's Magazine)

HERE is a characteristic Parisian street costume in a rich dark tete de negre velvet; the ripple movement in the skirt being accented by a cluster of mink bands.

THERE is nothing extreme in the street costume of the Parisienne. The fulness in this black velvet skirt has been modestly obtained by a cluster of plaits and the sombreness relieved by white carracul.

A PAIR OF SIXES

A Study of Love and Laughter Based on the Great Comedy Success of the Same Name

(Based on the entertaining play by Edward Peple, now playing at Ye Willing Theatre.—Copyright, 1914, by International News Service, sole owner of serial rights.)

Novelized By A. A. WATERBURY, Novelizer of "The Family Cupboard," "At Bay," etc., etc.

"NUT!" scoffed Nettleton.

"Mut!" retorted Johns.

"Tut tut!" chorused both.

And like two silly boys who take an immense amount of joy in the names they can invent to call each other these two grown men slammed their office doors and went to sulk, each like an Achilles in his tent.

Krome rushed to the water cooler and laved his heated brow.

"Say, Charley, if I want to keep this job I'll have to lead a double life!" philosophized Miss Parker aloud after a deal of silent reflection.

The door opened to admit Mr. Thomas J. Vanderholt, a slim and dapper gentleman in immaculate gray tweed, that just matched his silvering hair.

"Good morning," he said affably. "What's the matter? Same old fight?"

"Yes, but this time it's to a finish," said Krome, shaking his head sadly.

"Um! Bad as that, eh?" said Thomas J. Vanderholt. But he smiled when he said it.

Thomas J. Vanderholt was not disturbed at the thought of dissension in the camp of the partners in the Eureka firm. As a matter of fact this rather accorded with a little scheme of his own. Any friendship he had once felt for the members of the concern had given way to a sneering disrespect for these men who were not clever enough to push a good thing when they had it, and to sink all personal animosity in a united striving for the success they could win together.

Another lawyer had once called Vanderholt "as slick a piece of goods as his own silver varnished head." That description fitted to a nicety. Vanderholt was a suave gentleman whose quick brain and gift of oratory had generally won for him whatever he desired. But just now he desired Miss Florence Cole of Albany, and the good-natured bulk of one T. Boggs Johns stood in his way.

The only large thing about Vanderholt was his mouth. Many men with large, generous mouths are by no means equally large and generous in nature. The lips of Thomas J. were formed for oratory, not liberality. In just this one respect did his appearance belie his nature. Every other feature of the lawyer's alertly poised little body and keen face spoke his sharp nature. Only his generous mouth suggested a trustworthy simplicity that events would show plainly he did not possess.

"They want you to dissolve their partnership and let this fine, big money-making business go to smash," returned the frightened Krome.

"And we don't want to lose our positions. They're candy men to work for when they aren't wondering if you are on the jump to take orders from one quicker'n the other," added Sally.

A HARD TASK

Vanderholt smiled. He was thinking that a pretty girl like Sally Parker could get another position quick enough.

"Don't worry about that. Just have them out, and we will settle this thing for good and all."

"But you won't, sir!" protested Krome.

"Indeed you won't!" appended Sally.

The lawyer checked them with a lordly air that just failed of real effect because they both knew that he wore very high heels to bring his height up to its maximum of five feet six.

Krome shook his head sadly. It's gone too far! You can't smooth over what happened this time. Or if you do you've got to give them something with a real punch behind it!"

"All right, I will! Now, get them out!" commanded Vanderholt. "And then leave the case to me." He seasoned his command by a curt nod for Krome and a bland smile for Sally, and then tipped back on his heels to await the result of the twin summonses on the two ground-glass doors.

"Hello, boys! How are you?" he said blandly a moment later.

Nettleton advanced brusquely. "I'm the one who sent for you!"

Equally belligerent was the greeting of Johns: "And so am I."

Then in chorus they cried, while each one pulled at an arm: "Come into my office, will you?"

"Hold on! Hold on!" shouted their legal adviser, wellnigh tore between them as the two tugged at his arms. "This is one of the times when I'll have to take you both together!"

Still the opposing forces tugged and poor Vanderholt found himself swept from side to side of the office as the tide ebbed and surged from Nettleton to Johns. It was a most undignified position for the majesty of the law to find itself in, particularly in the presence of a laughing stenographer, who was well dowered with youth and beauty.

"Come on—come on. Sit down!" cried Vanderholt in staccato crescendo.

SALLY A WITNESS

The two men jerked out chairs and sank into them. Vanderholt made a rostrum back of the table and prepared to harangue his public. Sally advanced with a twinkle in her eyes, and with a cough and a handkerchief called into requisition to mask the smile on her lips.

"What is it, Miss Parker?" said the arbiter of the fate of the Eureka Company.

"Excuse me," choked Sally, "but would you like me to go—out—for a wh-while?"

"Yes, please," replied Johns.

"No!" thundered Nettleton, disagreeing as a matter of course. "I want her for my witness."

Johns rose in protest.

"Not a bad idea. I—we may need her," said Vanderholt. "Take a seat, Miss Parker," he concluded, in the particular variety of tone he saved for a pretty woman who was working for her living.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES IN GREATER BOSTON

The Lenten season will begin Ash Wednesday, February 17. Easter day will occur April 4. Extensive preparations are being made in Boston churches to observe the penitential season with religious services and special addresses or sermons.

Daily services will be held in all the Episcopal churches of this city during the forty days. Special services will be preached during the week by visiting rectors. St. Paul's Cathedral will have a daily noon service. Trinity Church will have a series of lectures known as the Price Lectures. Bishop Lawrence will preach in the Cathedral during holy week.

* * *

A special musical service will be held at the First Church, Eliot square, Roxbury, tomorrow evening. An attractive program has been arranged, consisting of selections by the Beethoven Quartet; Leon Van Vliet, cellist, and Miss Alice V. Cunningham, organist.

* * *

The Cockerel Church, called by the sailors "The Church of the Holy Rooster," situated at No. 237 Hanover street, reports 6,000 calls made by its ministers and workers during the last twelve months upon sailors on the different ships which come into Boston. Confidential talks are also given to those in need of advice. Forty-five thousand visits were made to this church during the last year.

* * *

A committee of representative ministers and laymen have been appointed by the Evangelical Alliance of Greater Boston to go to Philadelphia and confer with Billy Sunday about a series of revival services in Boston this Fall. The committee is headed by the Rev. Cortland Myers of Tremont Temple and the Rev. A. Z. Conrad of the Park Street Church.

The Unitarian ministers of Boston have passed a resolution condemning any religious campaign by this evangelist in Boston. The Episcopalian ministers refuse to take any action at their meeting, although it is believed that a few of them will take part in the meetings, should Billy Sunday conclude to come to Boston.

* * *

The Half-Hour Club of the New Jerusalem Church, Cambridge, will discuss "Garrison-by-the-Sea" at the residence of Mrs. L. F. Hite, No. 42 Arlington street, Cambridge.

* * *

Out of the 1,871 Protestant families in Westfield, there are 2,057 church members, and of that number 1,779 are regular churchgoers.

* * *

Rev. John Haynes Holmes of New York will conduct the services tomorrow morning in Ashton Chapel, Harvard University. He will also speak before the School of Social Science in Lorimer Hall in the evening.

* * *

The Rev. J. C. Jaynes, pastor of the First Unitarian Church, West Newton, has just completed his thirtieth anniversary at that church. Last Sunday by request he preached the sermon of thirty years ago, which was much enjoyed.

* * *

Unity Church, Natick, has organized the Natick Friendly Society, which is to be a clearing house for relief work for the unemployed in that town. The Rev. Alfred W. Birks is in charge. He believes the churches should be interested in the unemployed in every community.

* * *

The Rev. Elmer S. Forbes will talk upon prison reform before the Cambridge Association of Unitarian ministers at the Boston City Club, Monday, at 1 p. m.

* * *

Boston Unitarian ministers will discuss suffrage for women at their meeting in Channing Hall, Monday. Mrs. Marion Booth Kelley will introduce the subject.

* * *

The three speakers before the Congregational ministers' meeting Monday in Pilgrim Hall, are Madison Edwards, superintendent of the Salvation Mission, Shepard Bryce, Samuel Usher, president of Boston Seaman's Friend Society, and Mrs. H. A. Heathfield, president of the auxiliary.

* * *

A men's club has been organized at the Wollaston Baptist Church, with more than one hundred charter members. They will hold debates every month upon civic and social questions and their relations to the church.

* * *

An associated Bible school will be held February 15-18 in the Clarendon Street Baptist Church from 4 to 9 p. m. Dr. New Methods of teachings the Bible will be conducted. Miss Meme Brockway and Miss Lucie M. Gardner will present the principles of teaching.

* * *

The Rev. William L. Giles, pastor of the Cummington Baptist Church, received a purse of $50 upon the eighteenth anniversary of his birth.

* * *

The Rev. C. W. Allen of Milford will become pastor of the Dedham Baptist Church, March 1.

* * *

Boston students will hold a day of prayer under the auspices of the Young Men's and Young Christian Federation, Sunday, February 28.

* * *

"Conquest and Resistance as Spiritual Forces, Not Physical," will be discussed tomorrow afternoon in Huntington Chambers at 3 and 8 p. m. by Dr. Catherine H. Thompson.

* * *

A Lincoln supper will be served in the vestry of the Maverick Church, East Boston, Thursday, at 7 p. m. Mrs. Glendower Evans will give an address in this church on "Woman's Peace Party," Thursday, February 18, at 8 p. m. Five hundred calls upon Boston unmarried were made last Sunday by the men of this church.

* * *

Five men will conduct the evening service tomorrow in the Immanuel Baptist Church and talk upon subjects bearing upon the civic and religious needs of the community. The speakers will be Parker S. Merriam, Samuel Arthur, Joseph MacDonald, Gilbert H. Hamilton and Max Guggenheim. This new arrangement has been introduced by the pastor, the Rev. Arthur S. Burrows.

* * *

The Rev. J. K. Knotts, pastor of the Park Avenue M. E. Church, Somerville, is holding religious meetings for the East Maine Conference Seminary Students Up that State. "Fake Fire Apparatus" will be exposed by an address before the Brotherhood of the church by H. C. Lacount next Thursday evening.

* * *

The Rev. George R. Lunn of Schenectady, N. Y., and former mayor of that city, will speak Sunday, February 14, at 4 p. m., in the Tremont Theatre, on "Woman's Suffrage."

* * *

Prayer bands like a military company are being organized in many Methodist churches of Greater Boston, to follow successful revival meetings and to keep people informed about their church duties.

* * *

The Rev. Raymond Calkins of Cambridge will speak Monday morning before the Methodist ministers of Greater Boston at Wesleyan Hall, No. 581 Boylston street. The Rev. John W. Butler of Mexico will be given a farewell reception upon his departure for that country, where he has been a missionary for more than twenty-five years.

* * *

Lincoln Day will be observed by the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church on Friday, February 12, at 2 p. m., in the Fourth Methodist Church, Shawmut avenue. The Rev. E. E. Marsh of Charlestown will speak.

* * *

Nine Roxbury Protestant churches will begin a series of revival services tomorrow evening, to be conducted by the Rev. Dr. Milton Conrad Reese and his wife, of Rochester, N. Y. They will be held in Eliot and Immanuel Walnut Avenue Congregational Churches. All during next week they will take place in the other churches of that district.

* * *

The Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, pastor of the Ruggles Street Baptist Church, announces that his church will receive sixty persons into membership at the close of tomorrow morning's service.

* * *

Frederick M. Smith, newly elected president of the reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, will lecture on the policies of the church in Pearson's Theatre, Broadway, Somerville, tomorrow. Joseph Smith is the son and successor of the late Dr. Joseph Smith, organizer of the church.

THE REV. GEORGE A. GORDON, D.D., pastor of the Old South Church, one of the most noted preachers in the American pulpit.

Let Harvard Use Her Crimson Emblem—It Is Known All Over the World

Let us hope that a piece of hysterical legislation will not prevent Harvard University from using the color which has so long been associated with everything that is Harvard. There is no sentiment more cherished among the sons of Harvard, who are legion, than the sentiment for the Harvard CRIMSON.

It is a good color, it is an honorable color. It was selected years and years ago by Harvard men because it was supposed to represent manly virtues. It is a dominant color in the emblems of the greatest nations of the world. It is a dominant color in our own national emblem and we put it there for the virtues which the color sentimentally is supposed to represent.

If some organizations in our sad and unnecessary industrial disputes have abused it, the remedy is not to discard the color, but to correct those abuses which cause the trouble and mock the virtues poetically represented by the color itself.

It was a silly piece of maudlin sentimentality to have passed a GENERAL law against the carrying of a red flag under all the circumstances. A white flag carried by the same organizations would mean the same thing, and we can keep on thus denouncing colors until we have obliterated the rainbow from the sky, without correcting the wrongs against which the too strenuous methods of the I. W. W. are only a gentle reaction.

All the violence of that organization from the beginning, in every strike and agitation in which it has participated, would not equal one day's murderous work by the employing corporations in the Colorado mine strike or in the recent New Jersey assassinations, or, even in our own recent Ipswich shooting of helpless men, women and children by armed thugs in the hire of the employing corporation.

But if any member of the Legislature wishes to forbid the carrying of the red flag by too militant organizations, let the statute be drawn to prohibit that and nothing more.

Let Harvard enjoy its ancient colors, which all its sons have honored so many generations. Let us respect Harvard's sentiment; let us remember the words of Daniel Webster when he was pleading before the Supreme Court of the United States for Dartmouth College against the aggression of the State of New Hampshire: "I know that Dartmouth is a small college, but there are those who love her."

Harvard is a GREAT college and there are thousands who love her. We may criticize her often, but we all honor her still. We may think today that she is not abreast of the times, that she is not on the firing line of our great social and industrial conflicts, that endowments over-influence her and that the endowments come all from one side of the great social conflicts in which "peace is giving higher tests of manhood than battle ever knew."

But we have not forgotten how Harvard was founded and the part she has played in the life of the State and the nation. We do not forget that the American troops at midnight on their way to the battle ground of Bunker Hill knelt bare headed while the President of Harvard said a prayer for their success in a righteous cause.

We do not forget the unusual list of the sons of Harvard who gave their lives to save the Union. We do not forget that outside the borders of the Commonwealth it is an honor to the State to possess Harvard University; that Harvard is known throughout the world, and wherever she is known her crimson emblem is known.

The Terminal Problem Is a Public, Not a Private One

Mr. George F. Willett of Norwood made a very interesting proposal to a conference of the Boards of Trade of Massachusetts this week. He laid before that body a scheme for the creation of a Terminal Company, which should take over all the terminal facilities of the Port of Boston, including "rights of way, stations, rolling stock, freight yards of the New Haven, Boston & Maine and Boston & Albany Railroads, all steamship docks and terminals and all electric lines."

It cannot be doubted that sooner or later the terminal problem of the Metropolitan District must be dealt with in some such way as Mr. Willett proposes, BUT IT CANNOT BE DONE BY A PRIVATE ENTERPRISE. It is a State duty, a State function and is of State proportions. The unsavory rumors of graft which attended the construction of the South Station and that whole affair make no wholesome precedent for a private scheme.

Nor would it be proper for the State to guarantee the securities to be issued by a PRIVATE enterprise for this purpose. The attempt of private enterprise to have the State guarantee the risk is like trying to have your cake and eat it.

If the State is to participate in this enterprise it must be as the master. The tendency of modern development of terminal facilities is all in the direction of public ownership. Whoever stands in the way of public ownership stands in the way of progress.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Tells of Home Tragedy Due to Wife's Fortune

Husband Unwilling to Follow European Habit of Playing Gentleman on Helpmeet's Purse—Man Still Regarded as Provider in America

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

THAT is a sad little tragedy which happened recently in our land where a man divorced his wife because she had come into a fortune. It was not that the man objected to the money. He objected only to the life it entailed. It seems they had been a happy couple living simple, plain lives, with modest pleasures which they shared together until this money came.

Then the wife developed a taste for social diversions which entirely transformed their mode of living. The husband objected, feeling that it reflected upon his dignity and manhood to adopt an expensive mode of life which his own private purse was not able to maintain. He felt that to play the gentleman of leisure on his wife's income would lessen his own self-respect, and subject him to the criticism of his former associates. Wider and wider grew the breach between husband and wife until it ended in a divorce court.

It is doubtful if any other land on earth could furnish us with a parallel case. Men in all the old countries view marriage and money from an entirely different standpoint. The dot of a wife is an important consideration in marriage over there, and young men without money, but of good family connections, are educated by their parents with a view to fit them for accomplished husbands of rich wives. A man considers it a creditable thing to have won a rich wife and to be able to demonstrate her wealth for her according to his own ideas.

From the American standpoint this is not a lofty type of manhood. As our country grows older our ideas and our ideals are gradually degenerating from these and kindred matters. Among our ultra-fashionable people the foreign view prevails to more or less extent, and men who seek rich wives are not scarce, in our fashionable circles. But the good old virile ideas of man as the provider, of man the protector, are still extant, as this incident shows.

It is to be regretted that the woman in such a case did not love her husband and her home more than she loved the giddy whirl of social life. It is to be regretted that a compromise could not be effected whereby the wife might enjoy to a certain extent the new pleasures and new opportunities her fortune afforded her, while yet giving the greater part of her thought, time and affection to her husband and home.

It is a curious quality of the feminine make-up that causes this hunger and thirst for social prominence. In all the things which life can offer to human beings there is no more tasteless dead sea fruit than social prominence and power unless it has the background of a happy home and harmonious domestic relations. With that background all other pleasures may be enjoyed and leave no bitter taste on the lips afterward.

The woman who destroys such a background in order to attain eminence or prominence in anything is like an artist who would destroy his canvas and then try to paint his picture on empty air. To make a home, we should take all of love,
And much of patience, labor, and keen joy;
Then mix these elements with earth's alloy
With finer things, drawn from the realms above,
The Spirit Home.

There should be music, melody and song
Beauty in every spot; an open door
And generous sharing of the pleasure store
With fellow pilgrims, as they pass along
Seeking for Home.

To narrow bounds, let mirrors lend their aid,
And multiply each gracious touch of art,
And let the casual stranger feel the part—
The great creative part which love has played
Within the Home.

Here bring your best in thought, and word, and deed;
Your sweetest acts, your highest self-control.
Nor save them for some later hour or goal;
Here is the place and now the time of need—
Here in the Home.

THE INFINITE

By JANE M'LEAN

SOME ask for beauty, but I crave it not,
Nor gift of song to thrill the souls of men;
I'll take the art of dreaming for my lot,
And on the heights see life time and again.

When all is evident, and nothing more
Can be desired in beauty or in song,
Then from my deep and never-ending store
Of subtlety I dream my way along.

Truth has its charm is obvious but safe
To some who in realities must dwell,
But under Fancy's dictates let me chafe—
I'd live a life of dreams, and live it well.

Inklings and Thinklings

By WEX JONES

Life's mysteries: Parrots.

Speeches as revised by Congressmen for the Congressional Record are too modestly sprinkled with such tame interpolations as "Applause," "Laughter," etc. Why not bring the Record's version up to the speaker's real opinion and also introduce some up-to-date expressions.

"From Maine to California, (Knocked 'em flat), over this fair land of ours (Riot), this land of brave men (Knocked 'em out of their seats) and beautiful women (Stopped the bill)."

A lot better, we think.

Professor says he can make butter without a cow. A pipe. Buy a goat.

Somebody with a Roger W. Babson kind of mind dopes out that the U. S. A. will have a population of 100,000,000 at 4 p. m. April 2. Don't anybody go and spoil the figures by having twins.

THERE WAS ONCE A MR. PETER PIPER

There Is NOW a Mr. Hooper Hooper—Perhaps You Are Familar with the Pickled-Pepper Picking Proclivities of Mr. Peter Piper, but HAVE You Heard the Latest Hooper Hooper Yarn?

It will be told by the Dowager, in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

Q.—WHAT will be told in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN?

A.—The story of how Mr. Hooper Hooper whooped a whoop of Hooper whoops.

And who is Mr. Hooper Hooper?

"Tut, tut."

"Pish tush."

"Gadzooks," and "gramercy," and "by me halidom."

To live in Boston, and not to know Hooper Hooper, argues oneself unknown.

In Boston society, Mr. Hooper Hooper is It.

He says to this man come, and the gentleman designated approscheth, and he says to this man exit, and the old dear thus admonished vamooses.

Hooper Hooper is the WARD M'ALLISTER of these parts. His is the magic wand which openeth the doors of exclusive Boston.

And how came Mr. Hooper Hooper to whoop a whoop of Hooper whoops?

It was just after the recent Assembly ball at a Back Bay hotel.

You remember how the Mayor ordered the elect to quit dancing out there at 2 o'clock in the morning, and how Mr. Hooper Hooper promised over the telephone that perhaps they would, maybe, and how at one word from Mr. Curley the society folk did just as they pleased, and what a fuss there was about it in the newspapers for twenty-four hours, until Honorable Sullivan decided that, for the time being, the hotel ballroom was Hooper Hooper's castle, and "H. H." could do therein just as he bally well pleased?

It was all very trying.

Quite naturally, it got onto Mr. Hooper Hooper's nerves, old thing, and when, two days later, one of the fellows plumped into "H. H." in State Street, and asked "H. H." when the NEXT Assembly might be expected, Mr. Hooper Hooper up and said something emphatic.

But we musn't tell it here.

The Dowager tells it all, in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

The Dowager's chat of Boston society has become one of the most popular features of the most popular New England Sunday newspaper.

The Dowager writes of Boston society from the INSIDE.

Society sections of other newspapers, with all due respect, are based upon what somebody tells somebody else who tells somebody who knows a man who has a friend in the newspaper "business." The Dowager writes intimately of what she KNOWS.

Study the Dowager's contribution in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN, read about the Boston girl who has visited Europe every time she has gone away from Boston, but who this year will go "abroad at home" and see the United States, read the Hooper Hooper story, and observe the difference between a chronicle of social activities told in the first person, by one who knows, and the weekly review of those whose reports are, when all is said and done, merely hearsay.

On the serious side of life:

As a result of the Old World war, famine absolute and far-reaching today threatens the life of every Jew and every Gentile in Palestine and Syria.

Banks have closed in the Holy Land, food supplies are of the most meagre description, the finest young men of the Zionist colonies have marched away to the front. Gold is of little benefit. The cry is for flour, rice, coffee, tea, sugar, salt.

The American Jewish Relief Committee plans to rush a relief ship from New York to Palestine.

The editor of the Sunday AMERICAN has asked one of the foremost of Americans to tell the Sunday AMERICAN family all about this relief ship and its errand, and in tomorrow's paper Mr. Louis D. Brandeis responds with a full-page report of the conditions in Palestine and Syria and the reasons for the first relief ship of its kind that has ever sailed from New World shores.

You will observe that famine threatens not only Jew but Gentile, in Palestine and Syria, and you will be gratified by the declaration of Mr. Brandeis that Jew AND Gentile will be cared for by the relief ship of the American Jewish Relief Committee.

The appeal of Mr. Brandeis is addressed to all Americans. It will touch your heart.

King Ludwig of Bavaria, now in his seventieth year, has given his FIRST INTERVIEW to an American newspaper correspondent. Needless to say, this first reporter to interview the ruler of the South German Empire is a representative of the Hearst newspapers and the Hearst news service. His name is Edward Lyell Fox.

They chatted as one man to another, in the Wittelsbacher Palais in Munich, and Mr. Fox appears to have asked King Ludwig whether Germany is united, how the Socialists came to forget their opposition to militarism, and "how long the war will last."

This is what everybody in the United States wants to know, how long the war will last.

Who can answer the question better than one of the German kings?

To those who desire to be well informed about the European cataclysm we respectfully recommend Mr. Edward Lyell Fox's Sunday AMERICAN interview with Ludwig of Bavaria.

There will also appear in the Sunday AMERICAN—may we have for just a moment the attention of Massachusetts Republicans, Massachusetts Progressives and Massachusetts Democrats?—the report of an important interview with United States Senator John Wingate Weeks, by one of our young men at Washington.

Senator Weeks represents the militant wing, the up-guards-and-at-'em wing, of the Republican organization in Massachusetts. Perhaps he isn't the "boss"—horrid word!—but he doubtless is the leader. Senator Weeks' views about 1916 are as important as they are interesting. This exclusive Washington interview makes them very, VERY interesting.

FINALY, dearly beloved, the first Sunday of the month brings the AMERICAN Sunday Monthly Magazine, distributed with every copy of the Sunday AMERICAN WITHOUT extra charge. Fiction by Anna Katherine Green, Bruno Lessing and Jack London. A cover—worthy of a frame—by the celebrated Mr. Harrison Fisher.

P. S.—Hooper Hooper really didn't say anything "naughty," but just you see the Sunday AMERICAN!
